Four persons died and 14 others were injured sufficiently to receive hospital treatment as a result of a fire which destroyed the Alpine Hotel at 412 Pine street early yesterday.

Damage to the hotel, a five-story brick and stone structure and to nearby buildings was estimated at $48,500 by Fire Chief Frank Egenriether. Thirty pieces of fire-fighting apparatus responded to the five-alarm fire, the cause of which has not been determined.

Firemen fought the blaze for four hours before bringing it under control at 8 a.m. They were hampered by ice which formed on buildings, street, ladders, hose lines and on the firemen themselves.

The dead are:
Karl Oscar Hanson, 69 years old, a guest at the hotel.
Adolph O. Korst, 55, a guest.
Mrs. Rena Beach, 64, a guest.
Fire Capt. Ervin Schielestein, 48, of 5635 Lotus avenue, who apparently suffered a heart attack.

Clerk Smelled Smoke.
James O'Donnell, 3020A Clara avenue, night clerk at the hotel, said he smelled smoke around 4 a.m. in the vicinity of the elevator shaft. He made a tour of the five floors of the hotel, saw no evidence of fire, then returned to the ground floor.

There, O'Donnell said, he opened a door leading to the basement and saw that the basement was in flames. He immediately roused the hotel operator, David Kanner, who lives on the premises. Kanner began running through the building warning guests. O'Donnell, meanwhile, tried to turn in a fire alarm, but found the hotel telephone was not working, so he ran to the nearest phone a block away. The alarm was turned in at 4:12 a.m.

The fire apparently spread rapidly through the upper floors of the hotel. Thirty-five of the 50 rooms were occupied. Kanner said a guest of the hotel records of guests were destroyed, but an attempt was to be made today to account for everyone in the hotel at the time of the fire.

Guests Trapped in Rooms.
Injured guests were trapped in their rooms and suffered from inhaling smoke fumes and from exposure. They escaped through windows or down fire-escapes. Firemen assisted guests down the fire-escapes and took them from the windows with ladders.

Most seriously injured were Velma Standberg, 28, a nurse of Winston Salem, N. C., and Velda Reynolds, 24, a waitress. Both remained at City Hospital. The other injured fire victims were treated at the hospital and released.

Miss Standberg was a former WAC corporal. She was discharged Jan. 19, Miss Standberg attracted the attention of firemen by throwing a glass of water from the window of her room by throwing

ALLIED DEPUTIES DRAFTING PEACE TREATY TAKE UP ITALY FRONTIERS

Claims by Yugoslavia, France and Austria Before London Meeting of Foreign Ministers' Representatives.

By FLORA LEWIS
LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Deputy foreign ministers of the victorious nations sat down today to discuss Italy's boundaries with France, Austria and Yugoslavia in connection with drafting the Italian peace treaty.

The deputies have been meeting for about a week, but up to now they have been merely reviewing decisions reached by the Big Five Council of Foreign Ministers last September.

It was learned that Austria has sent in a written brief detailing its claims to part of the South Tyrol. The area in question is inhabited by about 250,000 German-speaking persons was awarded to Italy after World War I.

France has minor border changes to press. Officials at the conference said they thought the French would win their claim to a mountainous strip in the Aosta valley in northwestern Italy.

No action is expected on the Yugoslav frontier until a committee representing France, the United States, Great Britain and Russia visits the disputed Venezia Giulia area of northeastern Italy and makes its report.

Authoritative sources said they thought a proposed treaty with Austria would be negotiated through diplomatic channels. They pointed out the Foreign Ministers' representatives must complete treaties with Italy, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary and Finland by May 1 for submission to a 21-nation peace conference in Paris.

Preliminary negotiations for the treaty with Austria, it was said, already are under way in Moscow and Washington.

United States representatives were optimistic that an early agreement would be reached on Italy's new frontiers, but said there was no sign of an agreement relative to the future of Italian colonies.

The United States has proposed a United Nations Organization trusteeship over the colonies for 10 years, with independence at the end of that time. Russia, however, has asked for sole trusteeship over Tripolitania.

agreed to shoot his father. In reconstructing the crime from statements signed by French, Mrs. Westernman, and Gene Rothwell, Westernman had gone to bed on the night of the shooting and was awakened by his son, Gene, who told him that he was wanted downstairs.

When he went downstairs, Rothwell continued, Gene shot him in the chest on the porch. Westernman staggered inside the house and fell to the floor. At that time, the prosecutor said, Mrs. Westernman came down, stepped over the prostrate body of her husband, and watched as Gene fired again, shooting Westernman in the head.

When the youth attempted to reload the gun, Rothwell related, his mother told him, "That's enough, Gene."

Youth Is Nervous.
Throughout the hearing, the youth clenched and unclenched his hands. Police officers said the youth told them shooting his father was "just like shooting a hog."

In his statement, Rothwell declared French and Mrs. Westernman had taken $1500 that Westernman had sent home and had hidden the money. He said Mrs. Westernman told her husband on his return that the money had been stolen.

The county prosecutor said Westernman had come to him regarding the loss of the money.

In 1929, Rothwell stated, Westernman was served an egg in a St. Louis cafe on which was written "Edna Adkins" (Mrs. Westernman's maiden name). Westernman met the young girl and started a courtship which led to marriage. They had five children.

Miss Rose E. Westernman of St. Louis, sister of the murdered man, assumed guardianship of the four other children. She appeared in court during the trial.

U. S. OFFICIAL PREDICTS STEEL STRIKE'S END IN A FEW DAYS

Group Within Industry Favors Settlement, He Says—Hints at White House Action, but Not Seizure.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The labor-management picture took on its rosier hue in weeks today as one high government official predicted an end to the crippling steel strike "within a week or so."

Saying his forecast was based only partly on the trend shown in the recent Ford and Chrysler wage agreements, this official added that more particularly there were signs within the steel industry itself that settlement advocates were gaining the upper hand.

The official, closely concerned with Administration labor policy but otherwise not identified, said the industry had been divided into a "settlement bloc" and a "fight it out bloc," with the former now apparently in the ascendancy.

The White House probably will make no move for the "next three or four days," he said, but after that "a lot of things may happen." He added that Government seizure action is unlikely.

He did elaborate further. It was apparent that throughout the Administration there were high hopes that the week-end labor agreements would help induce settlement of the great steel strike and the General Motors tie-up.

A United States Steel Corp. spokesman here said that Benjamin F. Fairless, the company's president, was on his way to Washington "to confer with Government officials." The conference was not to be at the White House, the spokesman said, and he was unable to say which officials were to be visited.

Stabilization and reconversion officials were said to have reached a decision that steel price increase of about $4 a ton will be granted ultimately, as compared with the $7 a ton which Fairless has asserted was necessary before wage increases can be granted.

STRIKE MAY MAKE THOUSANDS IDLE
PITTSBURGH, Pa., Jan. 28 (AP)—Layoffs of workers by the thousands within the next few weeks in industries dependent on steel was foreshadowed today as the nation-wide strike of 750,000

CIO United Steel Workers for higher pay went into the eighth day.

In the automobile and auto parts industries alone nearly 250,000 workmen may be idle by the end of the week, industry spokesmen said. The auto industry is steel's biggest customer.

At Detroit, there was a tangible move toward settlement of at least part of the steel strike. Thomas Shane, USW district director, announced yesterday that negotiations had been resumed with a basic steel plant and four fabricating units. He declined to name the plants, but said they employ from 20 to 380 workers.

In the Pittsburgh area, the Tri-state Industrial Association, representing 56 strike-bound fabricating plants, asked the Government to make known the exact amount of the proposed increase in the price of steel.

The group, in a telegram to Reconstruction Director Snyder, asked that the information be made known immediately, because, as the result of its insistence that the steel workers' union negotiate separately with the fabricators, some have received offers from the union to start negotiations.

Frank Rising of Detroit, general manager of the Automotive and Aviation Parts Manufacturers, Inc., has estimated that 200,000 workers would be laid off by the end of the week as the steel strike forced the closing of many automotive parts plants.

Ford Motor Co. announced 25,000 workers would be laid off this week, in addition to the 15,000 laid off last week.

Some industries were cutting back production schedules to prevent complete shutdowns and avert layoffs.

A freight car shortage in the Pittsburgh area, caused by the hoppers being tied up at the strike-bound plants and sidings, forced thousands of mines into idleness in fluctuating shutdowns.

The union maintained token picket lines at entrances of steel mills across the nation, but for the most part the gates were closed and the plants were not operating.

The strike fields were generally quiet with only minor disturbances.

ROBERTS BOARD NEVER SAW 'MAGIC' DECODED MESSAGES

ly he remembered no such conversation with Capt. Zacharias, but the latter said he had discussed the incident with Capt. Smith since the Pearl Harbor attack and Smith recalled the details.

"I realize that Adm. Kimmel was a very busy man and that I was only one of hundreds to whom he talked," Capt. Zacharias said. "He might not remember the details of the conversation, but I am sure that Adm. Smith remembered."

He told the admiral, he said, that if the Japanese came from the north from carriers which would steam away immediately after launching their planes. The Dec. 7 attack was made in this manner.

Capt. Zacharias said he did not attempt to fix the date of the predicted attack in his talk with Adm. Kimmel and had suggested another method by which the Japanese might strike by air.

He said it was possible, but less likely, for the Japanese to smuggle seaplanes into the Hawaiian area on merchant ships.

Talked With Japanese.
The conversation with Adm. Kimmel came about, Capt. Zacharias said, as the result of a conference the witness said he had with Adm. Kichisaburo Nomura on Feb. 8, 1941, in San Francisco.

He said that he forwarded to Adm. Harold R. Stark, then chief of naval operations, a report on the talk with Nomura and sent a copy of it to Adm. Kimmel. He called on Adm. Kimmel when he arrived in Pearl Harbor, Capt. Zacharias said, to learn if Adm. Kimmel had received the report.

Adm. Kimmel had the report, he continued, and they discussed the strained relations then existing between the United States and Japan. He said the situation became worse, what Capt. Zacharias thought would happen.

"I said that if the situation became such that the Japanese decided they must go to war with us, it would begin with an attack on the fleet on a weekend, probably a Sunday," he related.

He said he predicted the Japanese would attempt to knock out four American battleships, the number having been fixed in his mind as the minimum the Japanese were likely to try to disable before moving southward.

"I told him such an attack undoubtedly would come in from the north, because that is the direction of the prevailing wind," Capt. Zacharias testified.

The committee has heard testimony that the sector north of Oahu was not searched by reconnaissance planes and that the Navy hunted unsuccessfully to the south and west for the Japanese task force after the attack.

Capt. Zacharias said Adm. Kimmel asked him how he thought an air attack could be prevented. He said he replied that the only way was to have a daily air patrol extending out at least 500 miles.

Adm. Kimmel said he did not have the planes and personnel to do that, Capt. Zacharias related, adding: "I said, well, admiral, you had better get them for that is what is coming."

MEAT WORKERS APPARENTLY ALL BACK ON JOBS

Production Resumed Quietly at Government-Seized Packing Plants After Strikes.

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP)—A Government spokesman said "apparently all" the 248,000 meat workers returned today to jobs in Government-seized meat packing plants, and production got under way after 12 days of strikes.

A CIO meat workers' union representative confirmed the Government spokesman's report, adding things were "all quiet on the meat packing front."

Patrick J. Gorman, president of the AFL Meat Workers' Union, said all his men returned to work Saturday.

Receipts of hogs at 12 leading Western markets were 136,000 today, compared with 53,045 a week ago and 72,085 a year ago.

Although slaughtering began today, carcasses must be "hung" 24 to 48 hours, so that deliveries in quantity to the country's butcher shops probably will not start before Wednesday. However, government managers of some plants said deliveries would be resumed immediately of meat taken from supplies on hand.

Gayle Armstrong, government director of the seized plants, issued a statement saying livestock receipts were substantial today and operations at packing plants "are proceeding smoothly."

"It will take several days to get everything completely back to normal, but we are very encouraged by the progress reports which are coming in today," Armstrong said.

With continued co-operation along the line, meat should be moving to the armed services and civilians in normal volume soon.

Armstrong warned livestock shippers to "continue close check with their agents" in order to avoid glutting markets by getting ahead of yard and plant capacities.

Before urging 193,000 CIO packhouse workers to go to work for Uncle Sam, Lewis J. Clark, union president, got Secretary of Agriculture Anderson's pledge to "apply immediately" for authority to put into effect any pay raise recommended by a fact-finding board studying the meat dispute.

Officials of the AFL Amalgamated Meat Cutters and Butchers Workmen union described their action in sending 55,000 members back to work a "temporary truce" which would last "at least until we know what the fact-finding commission will recommend."

The fact-finders, who conducted hearings in Chicago last week, have returned to Washington, and Dr. Edwin E. Witte, board chairman, said a conclusion would be reached in the "shortest possible time."

Brisk Trade at Stockyards as Packers Set Up Operations.
Trading was brisk today at National Stockyards as three major East Side packing plants, recently closed by strikes, prepared to resume full operations by mid-week.

Estimated receipts at the stockyards were normal for hogs, calves and lambs and only 20 per cent off for cattle. The Swift & Co. and Armour & Co. plants reopened under President Truman's seizure order, and the Hunter Packing Co. resumed operations after reaching a wage agreement with its production workers.

TRUMAN TO SEND MESSAGE ON BRITISH LOAN THIS WEEK
WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—President Truman told congressional leaders today he will send a message to Congress this week asking for ratification of the $4,400,000,000 British loan and credit agreement.

Senator Barkley, the Democratic leader, told reporters the message will go to the Capitol about the middle of the week.

"We also expect to get started soon on legislation extending the (economic) Stabilization Act and the authority of the OPA," Barkley said. The President has urged extension of the Office of Price Administration a year beyond June 30, its present expiration date.

TYDINGS DEMANDS WORLD PARLEY TO AVERT ATOM WAR

Scientist Tells Senate Committee Discovery 'Must Be Freed From Military Control.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Senator Tydings (Dem.), Maryland, demanded in the Senate today that President Truman immediately call a world disarmament conference to prevent an atomic war.

Interrupting the Senate filibuster against the Fair Employment Practice Commission bill, he said he doubted that the United Nations action for "control" of the atomic bomb would be successful.

"I do not believe that the United Nations Organization is equipped to initiate successfully a task of this magnitude," the Senator said, after pointing out that all the remaining great world powers are rearming to the teeth.

Threat in Armaments.
Because Germany and Japan are not to be permitted to rearm, Tydings said, there is this situation:

"It is as plain as the nose on one's face that the great armed forces of our own country are being maintained principally for possible use against Russia, Britain, France or China, since Germany and Japan are to be kept disarmed."

"If it not plain, too, that Russia is maintaining her armed forces for possible use against Britain or France or China?"

Tydings introduced a resolution calling for the world disarmament conference as he began a lengthy prepared speech in his support.

Saying that this nation had "weakened" itself in previous world disarmament moves, Tydings said now is the time for a showdown of good faith among the great powers.

"The U.N.O. seems content to have nations agree only for the control of the atomic bomb. It does not seem bent upon prohibiting its future use. . . . We seem to have forgotten the possibilities of the rocket, the V-1 and V-2 and other flying bombs which can wing their way near the stars on flight of hundreds of miles on their evil missions of destruction."

Scientist Testifies.
Earlier Senators were told by Dr. Harrison Davies of the Federation of Atomic Scientists that development of atomic energy "must certainly be freed from every vestige of military control."

Davies, a native of Winchester, Va., now is working at Oak Ridge, Tenn., site of an atomic bomb plant. He said he spoke for more than 1500 scientists and engineers connected with work on the new source of power.

He said in testimony prepared for the special Senate committee on atomic energy that "we wish to go on record most strongly as favoring complete exclusion of the military from any policy-making function on the commission" proposed for handling the problem.

Davies added, "We do not mean to exclude efficient liaison between the commission and the armed forces."

"However," he said, "it is in the best tradition of American government that policy be made by civilians."

Other points Davies made in endorsing the bill by Senator McMahon (Dem., Connecticut), to create a commission to handle

Speculation on Test of Atom Bomb, 1000-Mile Winds, 100-Foot Waves

Heat at Center of Blast May Reach 100 Million Degrees—Chain Reaction Danger Discounted.

By ELTON C. FAY
WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The atom bomb target fleet may be pummeled by thousand-mile winds, hundred-foot waves and steel-fusing temperatures.

Navy and army experts preparing for the joint tests have available extensive information gleaned from the studies made of the three bombs so far exploded—the initial test in New Mexico and the two attacks on Japan.

Here are some of the factors the naval, military and scientific experts have observed or anticipated:

1. Following in the wake of the initial pressure blast of hundreds of thousands of pounds per square inch at the core of the explosion is a true wind running up from 500 to 1000 miles an hour—a wind of short duration, but great intensity. (Any wind above 75 miles an hour is of hurricane force).

2. In the second test, where the bomb is detonated at the surface of the sea, it is expected a wave measuring as much as 100 feet from trough to crest may race outward.

3. In the very center of the so-called "ball of fire," a hot mass measuring about a third of a mile across, scientists believe heat up to 100,000,000 degrees Fahrenheit may develop. This temperature, of course, drops sharply as heat waves progress outward from the core, but still remains highly destructive. At Hiroshima, American scientists have reported, virtually all persons within about one mile of the bomb who were not killed by mechanical causes were burned fatally or seriously.

4. At the instant of explosion there is emitted a huge quantity of radiation. These radiation-like waves killed inhabitants of Hiroshima and Nagasaki who were directly under the bomb, affecting the blood-forming tissues and causing the blood to seep out through apparently undamaged skin and to drain into internal cavities. American military officials and scientists say there was virtually no residual effect from these rays in the two Japanese attacks. The bombs were exploded in mid-air and the rays dissipated too much to linger in the earth.

However, some scientists estimate that a bomb used on the surface, as in the second planned test, can deposit an enormous amount of radioactivity, equivalent to tons of radium. That menace has led the test planners to take elaborate precautions against accidents, including the evacuation of the atomic program included:

1. "As citizens we fear unwise laws on atomic energy for the same reason other citizens fear them; we too value our lives."

2. "Any domestic legislation must . . . encourage the international control of atomic energy."

3. "Vigorous research and development in nuclear science must be maintained. The use of the fission phenomenon and its by-products in physical, chemical, biological, medical and industrial research, as well as in power development, should greatly enrich our country and indeed all mankind."

4. "The bill . . . attempts to provide the freest possible exchange of scientific information. We strongly approve."

5. "We feel the espionage act will provide as much national security as can be found in a policy of secrecy."

6. "The policy of postponing large-scale industrial application is, in our opinion, a wise policy. . . . Premature development of special interests in this field may prejudice the possibility of international control."

7. "There can be no solution of the problem of security short of an effective international control of atomic and other weapons of offense, and of the elimination of war as a method for settling international disputes."

PLANTS GROWING IN HIROSHIMA AS PEOPLE REBUILD

Survivors Slowly Returning, Plant Gardens Before Starting Reconstruction.

By ROY ROBERTS
HIROSHIMA, Japan, Jan. 28 (AP)—Hiroshima, nearly consumed in the holocaust of the first atomic bomb last Aug. 6, is being restored.

Slowly those who escaped that searing blast are beginning to edge back into the ravaged areas of this once bustling city of nearly 400,000.

In the last month each day has seen some family start rebuilding a bamboo, wood or plaster dwelling on the site of its former home.

The desolation caused when the atomic bomb destroyed 60 per cent of Hiroshima's 6.9 square miles of built-up area gradually is changing.

Most of the persons burned in the explosion have recovered or died. Col. John R. Hall Jr. of El Paso, Tex., Tenth Corps surgeon, said today. He estimated that 47,000 were killed outright, 18,000 to 17,000 are missing and about 60,000 have died since the bombing from various contributing causes.

Principal Streets Cleared.
The survivors have lost their fear of the demolished region. What formerly were the principal streets have been cleared of debris and over them all day winds a slow procession of street cars, a few automobiles and many hand-carts carrying persons still living in the hills while they rebuild their shattered homes.

First, a marker is erected on the site, telling others someone in the family is still alive and planning to erect a new dwelling.

Before work begins a garden is started in the front yard. Most appear to be growing well. Weeds and wild grasses are sprouting between heaps of rubble, apparently thriving in the burned and blackened soil.

However, bushes and trees killed by the bomb still stand like grotesque, gnarled fingers bending backward from the epicenter of the burst.

Some Have Electricity.
The return to the city started on the perimeter of the burned area and is creeping inward. Many families have strung makeshift power lines to their new homes and electric lights burn weakly here and there at night.

One group uses an electric hot plate for warmth while eating supper. Music from Japanese records played on an old mechanical phonograph produces a weird effect.

Mayor Hichiro Kihara said the city was planning to rebuild with money raised by bond issues and increased taxation. The greatest difficulty, he said, is the lack of materials.

A plea for "outside assistance" however was submitted to members of the Far East Commission inspecting the ruins. The Governor of the prefecture told the members the city should be reconstructed as a symbol of the new world order of peace.

CPA CHIEF URGES WAR TECHNIQUE TO INCREASE GOAL SET FOR HOUSING

John P. Small Says U.S. Could Erect Plants If Private Firms Lagged in Output of Building Materials.

By JOSEPH HANLON
A Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28.—Civilian Production Administrator John P. Small, telling a House committee today that the nation's announced housing goal for this year "can be, should be and must be raised," suggested the job might be done if the Government went about it as it undertook war production.

These views were not volunteered by Small, but elicited under persistent questioning by members of the House Banking and Currency Committee. The suggestions he advanced concerning how housing construction may be increased over the present program appeared to be drawn from material now under consideration by Wilson Wyatt, Federal Housing Expediter, and lately designated National Housing Agency Director.

Wyatt is to appear tomorrow before the committee, which is considering the Patman housing bill. He is expected to present details of the revised housing program on which he has been working with Small and other administration officials.

Suggests U. S. Plants. "We can do the job," Small said, "if we use the techniques we used during the war to expand production capacity. As shortages in materials develop, if private risk capital does not take on the job, the Government can do it. Suppose we want a plant to produce another 1500 units of section pipe a month. We can build more production capacity for that plant, or we can grant tax amortization privileges, or, as a last resort, the Government can build its own plants, as it built the aluminum plants for the war."

Small had told the committee that the present problem, in production of the 11 critically short materials for which CPA has established priorities, was largely manpower shortages. A contributing factor in some areas, however, he said, was inadequate utilization of existing plant facilities. As these bottlenecks are solved, however, he warned that new ones would appear.

Demobilization would eliminate the manpower shortages, he thought, but soon there will be a shortage of plant capacity, assuming that the housing goal is stepped up from the present 475,000 to 500,000 units for this year. If risk capital does not provide the additional plant capacity, Small said, the Government will have no alternative but to stop in and see that the plants are built or that equipment is provided for existing plants in need of it.

Depends on Industry. "What you are telling us then," said Representative Jesse P. Wadsworth (Rep.), Michigan, "is that whether government goes into the field is predicated on what private industry does in the next two or three months?"

"Exactly," Small replied. Some of his questioners wanted to know why there should be any question of whether private capital would meet the need, when the demand appears to be so great, and capital accumulations are so large. "You may have a plant that isn't operating because its equipment needs rehabilitation," Small replied.

"Maybe it would cost $100,000 to rehabilitate it. The owners may say they don't know how long this market will last, and they are not inclined to put another $100,000 into the plant."

There are "hundreds" of causes for inadequate production, he continued, and one of the most important is the question of financing.

Example Cited. "I'll give you an example," he went on. "There are some great war plants that are idle—airplane plants for instance. I think there is a great future for prefabricated housing, which might be made in such plants. A flood of prefabricated housing would solve this housing shortage sooner than almost any other thing I know. But private capital is not going into the matter on any broad scale."

A suggestion that the Government sponsor use of idle war plants for the manufacture of prefabricated housing is widely reported to be one of the proposals Wyatt will make in the revised administration housing program. A bill which would make this possible has been introduced in the Senate by Senator Harley M. Kilgore (Dem.), West Virginia.

Representative Wolcott questioned whether new legislation would be required for such a program, and inquired if the Reconstruction Finance Corp. could not undertake it under powers given it to deal with war emergencies.

2-CHARGED WITH SALE OF LIQUOR TO MINORS

Youths Say They Were Told Management Wouldn't Serve Soft Drinks.

Haliday D. White and Vertis McWilliams, Negro waiters at the Forest Park Hotel Snack Bar, were held today on charges of selling intoxicating liquor to minors after state liquor agents and officers of the police liquor squad reported they had found them selling alcoholic drinks to 20 young men and women under 21 years of age Saturday night.

The officers sat in the bar at Euclid avenue and West Pine boulevard for two hours watching young people at the tables around them drinking beer and gin. The boys and girls, ranging in age from 15 to 18, agreed to pose for evidence to the circuit attorney's office. Several said they were told by one of the waiters it was against the policy of the management to serve soft drinks.

The investigation was made after a number of letters had been sent to the Police Department alleging minors were being served intoxicating drinks at the snack bar. Both White, who gave his address as 1405 Walton avenue, and McWilliams, 1218 North New, told police they made only occasional checks of the ages of customers.

Oscar Winheim, manager of the snack bar, declined to comment.

1000 PICKET WESTERN UNION BUILDING IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—Striking members of the CIO American communications Association threw 1000 pickets around the Western Union Building today, shouting at everyone entering the building in attempts to discourage them from going to work.

Two hundred policemen were on duty and there were several minor scuffles, but no one was arrested. The union is striking against Western Union in a wage controversy.

Union assistance program under CPA intended to channel into the construction of homes costing not more than $10,000 or renting for not more than $80 a month, half of the building materials in sight when the 475,000 to 500,000 goal for new homes was set for this year.

Small sought to reassure the committee that a substantial portion of applications for these priorities were for homes which would cost much less than $10,000 and rent for less than $80 a month. His figures were based on 25,890 applications received by the Federal Housing Administration through Jan. 24, the first nine days this program was in operation. Of these, 42.8 per cent were for homes renting for less than $50; 20.6 per cent for homes renting for more than $50 but less than $80, and 36.6 for homes renting between $80 and $100.

Small's figures showed, incidentally, that this program appeared to be lagging in St. Louis. There were 10 per cent of the applications for homes costing between $950 and $10,000.

4 Persons Die, 14 Injured When Fire Destroys Hotel

fered severe cuts on his forehead when a part of the hotel wall fell on him. The roof and the west portion of the building collapsed during the fire.

Other hotel guests who were treated for injuries suffered by having inhaled smoke include Leroy Harvatin, 3613 Ohio street, who also suffered burns; Helen Newcomb, 3559 Lindell boulevard, a shoe factory worker; William C. Shearer, a permanent guest; George Joyce, 3633 Virginia avenue, a clerk; George Hosick, a permanent guest; Marie Mitchell, permanent guest; Roy Maier, permanent guest; Mrs. Sylvia Stevenson and her husband, James Stevenson, both of 3424A Utah street.

Hanson, fatally injured in the fire, was found in his room on the second floor. He formerly operated a confectionery in the 5500 block of Brannon avenue. Korst was a clerk in the delivery department at Scruggs-Vandervoort Barney department store, where he had been employed for 43 years. Mrs. Beach was identified by her sister, Mrs. Nora Jones, also a guest at the hotel. Korst and Mrs. Beach lived in fourteenth floors.

Capt. Schleifstein collapsed while directing fire-fighting operations from an alley east of the hotel. An autopsy was to be performed today to determine the cause of death. He was not injured.

Firemen today continued to search the debris for additional bodies. The search was delayed because of the danger that the entire building would collapse. Pine street was roped off from Broadway to Fourth street and remained closed today. Street cars and other transportation were routed around the roped-off area.

The city detective arson squad was assisting the Fire Marshal in an investigation of the cause of the fire. Fire Chief Egenrieder said one side of the elevator shaft was lined with wood, but that it had been built before the present building code prohibiting this type of construction became a law and therefore was no violation.

The fact that the wood extended up and down the shaft, however, together with the presence of inflammable greases in the shaft, assisted the upward spread of the fire, he said. Several fire doors closed to slow down the spread of the fire through the building, the Fire Chief said. Exits in the hotel included three outside fire-escapes and a metal-enclosed stairway, he said.

An inquest was set for tomorrow. Damage listed by the Fire Chief included $30,000 to the hotel building, $15,000 to its contents; $2500 to the Meyer Hotel at 114A North Broadway, across the alley from the Alpine Hotel; and $1000 to Barker's Tavern, 114 North Broadway.

Mrs. Ramona Stanford, 18, who was staying with her husband, Jack Stanford, a recently discharged sailor, on the third floor, said she was awakened by smoke. "I put on my dress and ran across the hall, but it was too smoky, so I came back into the room," she said.

AFL MECHANICS BACK ON JOBS AT 12 TRUCK FIRMS

Threatened Shutdown of Drayage Companies Averted by Settlement of Wage Dispute.

Striking truck mechanics returned to their jobs today following settlement of their wage dispute with 12 long-haul truck companies yesterday.

The agreement, terms of which were not revealed, averted a threatened shutdown of the firms through picketing by the 126 mechanics, members of the AFL International Association of Machinists. The companies had resumed operations only last Friday after being closed for 18 days during the truck drivers' strike, but the mechanics refused to return to work until their dispute was settled.

Announcement of the settlement was made by Jack Manning, union business agent, after a meeting of the truck companies' representatives which was called to consider a union counter-proposal for a 10-cent hourly wage increase retroactive to last Aug. 18 and an additional 5-cent increase effective May 1.

In making the proposal, the union served notice it would picket the companies today if it was rejected. Other issues were settled previously, the operators agreeing to two-week paid vacations after five years' service and overtime pay for Sunday and holiday work. The union's request for 10-cent night differential pay was withdrawn.

Before the new agreement, the mechanics received $1.05 an hour. The 12 companies involved in the settlement were: Consolidated Forwarding Company, Hayes Freight Lines, Western Trucking Co., Daniel Hamm Drayage Co., Coakley Transport Service, Inc., Plaza Express Co., Humann and Roper Freight Lines, Yellow Transit Co., Anderson Motor Service, Brashers Freight Lines and Viking Freight Lines.

Manning said that mechanics' contracts with 18 other long-haul truckers will expire within the next few months and that similar wage demands will be made on them. He added, however, that the newly-signed agreement probably would serve as the basis for settlement with the others.

Negotiations on the wage demands of 350 dockmen, members of the AFL Teamsters' and Chauffeurs' Union, on 92 long-haul truck companies were interrupted by the truck drivers' strike. The dockmen, who load and unload freight, are seeking pay increases ranging from 20 to 27 cents an hour over present scales of 75 to 85 cents an hour.

ST. LOUISAN WHO FOUND IT GETS 120-DIAMOND BROOCH

Virginia C. Kammerer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Webb L. Kammerer, 7218 Maryland avenue, University City, was declared the owner of a 120-diamond brooch valued at $1500 today in New York when no one else had proved ownership.

Miss Kammerer found the brooch last Sept. 24 in the lobby of the Waldorf-Astoria, her mother told the Post-Dispatch, and turned it over to the hotel's manager. A week later she turned the brooch over to police after it was not claimed by the hotel.

Her mother said she went to New York last September after completing a course of study at Washington University. Miss Kammerer, 23 years old, attended public schools in University City.

WITNESS WARNS SENATORS AGAINST 'LABOR-BAITING'

Northwestern U. Professor Tells Committee Harsh Legislation Would 'Bring Us to Verge of a Civil War.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Harold C. Havighurst, a professor of labor law, today advised Senators against enacting any "labor-baiting legislation" at this time, saying it could "bring us to the verge of a civil war."

As the Northwestern University teacher talked to the Senate Labor Committee, the House Rules Committee faced a showdown vote on strike legislation. Havighurst urged the Senate Committee to support President Truman's request for "fact-finding legislation," saying opposition to it comes from the "stronger employers and the stronger unions."

The Administration proposal would set up fact-finding boards with subpoena power and would prohibit strikes for 30 days while the boards sit. The bill before the House committee does not provide for either subpoena power or a cooling-off period before strikes, but minus the subpoena provision.

COUNTY LEAGUE NAMES THREE TO ANTI-SMOKE BODY

Mayor Kinyon of Kirkwood, University City Attorney Boisseau, Louis Richter to Serve.

Appointment of three members of the St. Louis County League of Municipalities to the Area Smoke Committee was announced today by John D. Coffman, league president and Mayor of Overland. Those named were Mayor Albert S. Kinyon of Kirkwood, who will serve as chairman; Marvin Boisseau, city attorney of University City, and Louis Richter, 44 Hillvale drive, Clayton, president of the St. Louis Janitor Supply Co.

Each of the men appointed, Coffman said, is experienced in smoke control and each represents a community in the county where smoke control has been effective. While St. Louis county has practically no smoke problem now, he added, the league is anxious to co-operate with the city governments of St. Louis and East St. Louis in controlling smoke throughout the area, and the newly-appointed committee will work toward that end in co-operation with the Area Smoke Committee.

The decision to appoint the committee was voted at the regular meeting of the league in Clayton City Hall attended by representatives of 50 cities and villages in the county last Thursday. At that time Coffman said county communities that have smoke elimination ordinances will be encouraged to enforce them rigidly and other communities that do not have such ordinances will be requested to enact them if the need is apparent.

The new appointees will meet with members of the area committee, which was formed two weeks ago at a meeting of representatives of the city, county and East St. Louis in Mayor Aloys P. Kaufmann's office. The next meeting of the area committee has been set for Feb. 5 at the First National Bank of East St. Louis. Arnold C. Johnson, president of the bank, is president of the area committee.

The fact-finding boards which have already been set up by the President in the General Motors and steel situations. In both cases, industry has refused to comply with the recommendations made. "We feel the only way in which a real solution can be found is a more comprehensive study of the underlying causes."

"We firmly believe that the labor-management situation at the present time is so serious that it demands study of the basic underlying causes in an effort to find a lasting solution, rather than ineffectual, meaningless legislation which will do nothing but further confuse the picture."

The minority report was signed by Representatives Kelley and Green of Pennsylvania, Hook and Lesinski of Michigan, Powell of New York, Geelan of Connecticut and Patterson of California, all Democrats.

Issues of House Procedure. In a two-hour session, the House Rules Committee failed to reach an agreement on procedure governing consideration of the fact-finding bill, and Chairman Sabath (Dem.), Illinois, called another session for tomorrow. Then the

DORIS DUKE WINS FIGHT AGAINST TAX LEVY OF $14,000,000

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Supreme Court turned down 7 to 0 today a New Jersey township's effort to collect nearly $14,000,000 in taxes from Mrs. Doris Duke Cromwell.

Justice Douglas delivered the opinion. Justices Jackson and Murphy took no part in the case. Hillsborough township in Somerset county, N.J., tried to collect taxes on intangible personal property which it assessed at $221,940.438. The tax claim was made against Mrs. Cromwell individually and as a trustee of the Duke endowment. The endowment was set up by her late father, James B. Duke, for the benefit of Duke University.

Charles E. Hughes Jr., son of the retired chief justice, argued before the Supreme Court in behalf of Mrs. Cromwell, that she was not a resident of New Jersey but had her home in Hawaii; the endowment functioned outside of New Jersey; the township "deliberately singled out Mrs. Cromwell to impose a discriminatory burden." He said the township's annual budget usually is around $97,000.

The New Jersey United States District Court and United States Circuit Court of Appeals in Philadelphia ruled against the township. It appealed to the Supreme Court.

TWO MADISON STORES DESTROYED BY FIRE

3 Persons Living on Second Floor Carried Down Firemen's Ladder.

A spectacular fire which started early this morning in the basement of the Fredman Brothers Hardware Co., 1127 Madison street, destroyed the two-story brick building and an adjoining one-story brick building occupied by the Schermer grocery next door.

Three tenants of a rooming house over the hardware store, operated by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Scher, were carried down ladders by firemen while 12 others in the building escaped by way of stairs. The blaze interfered with the operations of cars over the Illinois Terminal Railroad Co. tracks between St. Louis and Granite City necessitating a bus shuttle service between Tenth and Thirteenth street to accommodate many residents of Granite City on their way to work in St. Louis.

Difficulty in fighting the blaze was caused by the lack of an outside entrance to the basement of the hardware store. Firemen were compelled to knock a hole through the brick wall in order to play streams of water into the basement. The consequent inflow of air sent the flames roaring through the upper part of the buildings.

Two departments from Madison were assisted in fighting the fire by a department from Granite City and one from the Granite City Engineers Depot. Large crowds gathered to watch the efforts of the firemen. No one was reported injured.

KILLED WITH BORROWED GUN

Samuel Gray, owner of the Progress Hotel, 4115 Manchester avenue, died at St. Louis County Hospital last night, after he had shot himself at the home of a friend, Howard B. Eldridge, 705 Edgar road, Webster Groves.

Police said Eldridge told them Gray borrowed a shotgun to lend to a friend. A few minutes after he had given Gray the weapon, Eldridge said, he heard a shot. He found Gray, wounded in the chest, lying on the floor in the basement. The gun was by his side. Gray told officers he had shot himself.

CIO GETS 17 1-2-CENT RISE AT R.C.A. PLANT

Agreement Viewed as Possible Basis for Settling Electrical Strike.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—A possible basis for settlement of the two-week strike of 200,000 CIO electrical workers was projected today by announcement that Radio Corporation of America and the union had agreed on a 17 1/2-cent-an-hour wage increase for 8000 Camden (N. J.) workers.

The agreement, announced here yesterday by David Sarnoff, president of RCA, and James J. Matles, director of organization of the United Electrical, Radio and Machine Workers, was reached without a strike and without Government intervention. Negotiations had been in progress three months. Some labor circles suggested the RCA Camden contract might provide a basis for settling the nation-wide dispute.

No Word on Strike Situation. There was, however, no direct word from other strike-bound major electrical industries as to any change in position concerning union demands.

The Camden workers, employed by the Victor Division of RCA, were to meet at union headquarters there today to ratify the settlement, which includes also retroactive increases to Oct. 7, 1945, and six paid holidays a year. The new contract, effective until Oct. 7, 1946, carries a no-strike provision. Union employees at the Camden plant originally sought a pay rise of 25 cents an hour—the same amount demanded by other CIO members who struck Jan. 15 at plants of General Electric, Westinghouse and the electrical division of General Motors.

Offers By Companies. General Electric offered increases of 10 to 15 cents an hour, General Motors proposed 13 1/2 cents and Westinghouse said it would be agreeable to increasing the work week from 40 to 45 hours, with time and a half pay for the last five hours.

Negotiations in the dispute have been at a standstill since the walk-out, which generally halted the production of appliances for home and industrial use. Last week,

Secretary of Labor Schwellenbach chose William H. Davis, former War Labor Board chairman, and Arthur S. Meyer, chairman of the State Mediation Board, to attempt to bring about a settlement. The Camden plant manufactures radios, television sets, radar apparatus, phonograph and electronic equipment.

CITY TO BUY 100 PRE-BUILT HOMES FOR VETERANS

Cost of Prefabricated Houses Would Range From $1350 to $2150, McAfee Says.

Plans for purchasing 100 prefabricated houses, to be erected for veterans and their families, were announced this afternoon by J. Wesley McAfee, chairman of the Citizens' Emergency Housing Committee, at a Board of Aldermen hearing on the proposed ordinance to relax zoning law requirements in residence districts.

McAfee said the prefabricated houses would be like those now being put up on Washington University campus, and that their cost, erected, would be $1350 for a one-bedroom house, with living room, kitchenette and bath; and $2150 for a larger house with two bedrooms.

McAfee's announcement followed his argument before the Zoning and City Planning Committee of the Aldermen, for the zoning relaxation proposal. Answering speakers who had opposed it, McAfee said the measure was needed to aid in what might become a desperate situation. "If it furnished no new living space," he said, "no harm will be done; if it does help, it will be a Godsend to the city."

A veterans' committee, petitioning the aldermen to pass the relaxation measure, asked also that the bill be amended to make the relief apply to the general public, and not to soldiers and ex-soldiers alone. This, the veterans said, might cause it to be invalidated as class legislation.

"Aside from the unfortunate omission of members of the wartime merchant marine," the veterans' committee said, "the committee wishes to emphasize that it is not only veterans who are confronted with a housing problem, but the people generally, and we veterans in no way dissociate ourselves from others in need."

The veterans' statement was presented to the aldermen by Douglas MacLeod, 2549 Russell boulevard, member of the executive board of the St. Louis Veterans' Committee on Housing and Jobs. The aldermanic committee chairman is Alderman Joseph Saputo.

"Relaxing the zoning law," the veterans' committee said, "will not solve the city's housing crisis, even temporarily. An adequate program must also include immediate erection of new housing of all types, including pre-fabricated houses and trailers as well as permanent houses; also conversion of existing non-resident buildings to dwelling purposes, sequestration of building materials now available, requisition of vacant dwelling houses, transfer of hotels and other housing facilities from the War and Navy Departments to the city. "These and other things can and must be done. The fact that none of these measures has been accomplished, that in this city not one single unit of housing has been produced by the responsible authorities, is all the more reason for the speedy lifting of the zoning law, in order that at least the additional facilities thus made available can be immediately utilized."

Need for Single Rooms.
To the argument that most of the space made available by zoning relaxation would be single rooms, the committee said "a substantial number of veterans," including many students, desired single rooms. A recent request of the Washington University Alumni Bulletin for information as to "any available single rooms" was cited.

"There is good reason to believe that considerable housing would be made available," the committee said. It cited a real estate dealer's report showing 76 rooms available in five houses on Vandeventer place, with the statement that the occupants of the houses wished to have the laws changed. However, property deed restrictions figure in the Vandeventer place situation.

Mrs. George Gehlhorn spoke against the measure, and presented a letter from Mrs. Aaron Fischer, president of the League of Women Voters, citing the report of the sub-committee of the Emergency Housing Committee, opposing the relaxation. The housing committee as a whole did not approve the sub-committee's report. Mrs. Fischer's letter expressed the fear that the measure would "maintain and spread blighted areas."

Edwin Smith, chairman of the General Council on Civic Needs, and Elmer B. Klein, chairman of the zoning committee of that body, also spoke against the proposal. Klein said, in reply to a question from Alderman Herman Novack, that the Council on Civic Needs never took affirmative action favoring a change in the zoning laws; it either opposed or took no action.

MAN HURT IN AUTO CRASH DIES

Adolph Boldt Jr., a building contractor, 5350 Helen avenue, Jennings, died Saturday afternoon at St. Joseph's Hospital, St. Charles, of a fractured skull suffered several hours earlier in a head-on automobile collision on United States Highway 61, near Troy, Mo. He was 39 years old. The driver of the other car, Bernard McMann, 5560 Pershing avenue, suffered minor injuries. Boldt's wife, Mrs. Lydia Boldt, was treated at St. Joseph's Hospital for lacerations. Their two small children, also riding in the car, were uninjured.

END TO BICKERING AT LUCAS-HUNT VILLAGE SOUGHT

Tenants of Apartments to Elect Committee to Develop Co-operative Spirit.

Tenants of Lucas-Hunt Village, Normandy, will elect informal representatives Friday to work in committee with the managers of the 606-apartment community in an effort to substitute picnics, sports and women's club activities for quarreling over terms of occupancy.

The seven-year history of the apartment group has been enlivened by attempted banning of pets by the managers, litigation over proposed rent increases and strife over summertime water shortages in third-floor apartments.

Harold C. Narrow, manager, who is sponsor of the election, says he hopes that the new renters' representatives will bring difficulties to light early and iron them out with him before they grow acute. The positions will be purely honorary, however, since the apartments are not incorporated as a village.

"We also hope to develop a community spirit of co-operation through getting together for tennis, golf and playground activities for children," Narrow said.

Takes Second Meal to Provide Conversation When Others Freeze Up.

CHUNGKING, Jan. 28 (AP)—A talkative sergeant got a double meal yesterday because Gen. Marshall turned up at United States Army's headquarters mess for lunch. Marshall, accompanied by Col. Lloyd W. Goeppert of Hollywood, Calif., Chungking station commandant, arrived without warning as most of the G.I.s were halfway through their meal.

The general and the colonel sat down casually at one of the tables. The soldiers, not entirely easy, answered Marshall's casual remarks in monosyllables. Col. Goeppert whispered to a mess officer to bring around someone who might not be so tongue-tied. The mess officer promptly picked Sgt. Robert Cressy of Utica, N. Y., and seated him beside Marshall.

Cressy already was nearly finished at his own table but nonchalantly started all over on a new meal, chatting easily the while. What they talked about was not disclosed, but Marshall, who finished first, sat until Cressy was through eating.

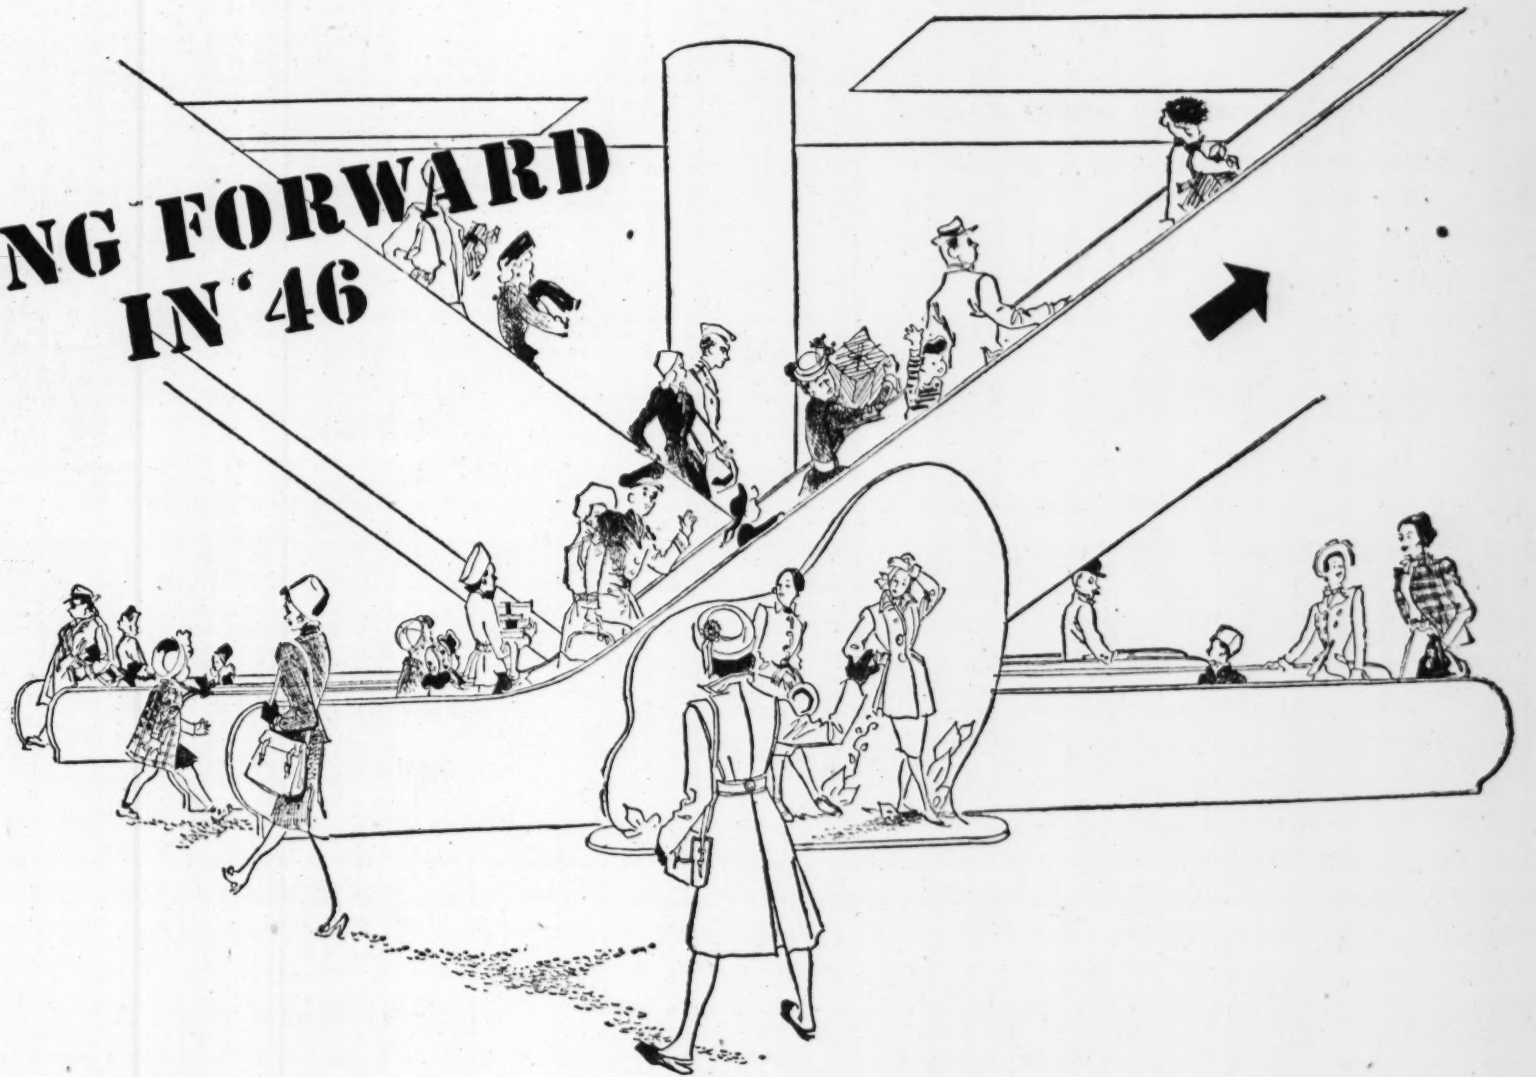

As they rose to go, the general remarked, "This is precedent-making; for once I have not had to sign an autograph." The words were no sooner out of his mouth than a soldier who had just heard of Marshall's presence rushed up with a short-snorter bill in his hand. Marshall smilingly signed.

GERMAN VOTING DOMINATED BY CHRISTIAN SOCIAL UNION

More Than 3,000,000 Cast Their Ballots in Election of Rural Councils in American Zone.

FRANKFURT, Jan. 28 (AP)—The slightly right-of-center Christian Social Union emerged today as the dominant party in rural areas of the United States occupation zone in Germany, on the basis of returns from yesterday's elections.

More than 3,000,000 Germans went to the polls in the elections, limited to communities of less than 20,000 persons for rural council seats.

The slightly left-wing Social Democrats, who led in similar elections a week ago Sunday in Greater Hesse in communities of less than 5,000 persons, were runners-up yesterday to the Social Union. Both the left-wing Communist party and the extremely conservative Liberal Democrats trailed far behind.

The two elections constituted the first free voting in Germany in 13 years.

United States Military Government officials had estimated that 4,778,000 persons were eligible to vote in yesterday's elections. Thus the turnout was considerably lower proportionately than in the much smaller Greater Hesse elections the previous week, when 83 per cent of those eligible cast their ballots.

Results from 9,600 of 10,000 local communities in yesterday's balloting showed, according to Military Government tabulations:

Social Union, 1,200,000 votes and 20,071 seats; Social Democrats, 723,180 and 7,453; Communists, 109,968 and 506; Liberal Democrats, 51,968 and 556; independent and other candidates, 748,373 and 23,403.

Largely Catholic Bavaria swung the balance in favor of the Social Union, which is an amalgamation of Protestant and Catholic interests and farmers.

The American-sponsored German news agency D.A.N.A. reported the arrest of a German Communist leader in Heilbronn for giving election officials false information.

In Wielehau, the burgomaster was arrested for marking ballots to give Social Democrats an unfair advantage, D.A.N.A. said. At Oberstaufen several persons were taken into custody for distributing illegal pamphlets.

Reservation by Vishinsky.

Taqizadeh appeared at the Council table on the invitation of the 11 members after Vishinsky made it clear he had agreed only to a discussion at this time whether the Council should formally take jurisdiction of the Iranian case. Vishinsky reserved the right to press his request, previously filed, that the dispute be left to direct negotiations between Tehran and Moscow.

Taqizadeh told the Council that in Azerbaijan the Iranian government "has been prevented from exercising any power whatsoever." The Russians set up "internal barriers" at the frontier of their "so-called zone," he charged. He added that Iran had tolerated this during the war but that now "these interferences" should cease.

Taqizadeh said Iran allowed itself to be used as a transportation route for Soviet war supplies and contributed supplies of its own to Russia, to the detriment of the Iranian people.

"Spirit of Justice" Urged.

He said negotiations with Moscow had not produced results and asserted the "attitude of the Soviet government is directly contrary to the 1942 treaty of alliance."

"I am confident," he said, "that in the spirit of justice which animates the new world organization, the Security Council will grant Iran's request that pending the withdrawal of forces, Iran should have full freedom of action in its territory."

Taqizadeh's arguments in general followed the line of previous Iranian delegation complaints to the Council. He made no reference to Iran's recent change of government or Premier Ahmed Qavam's assertion that he would seek direct negotiations with Moscow.

Several hours before the Council met, Ahmed Qavam announced in Tehran he had instructed the Iranian delegation to discuss the complaint with Vishinsky. Ahmed Qavam said the instructions had been cable to the Soviet Premier at the time of the Big Three Conference at Tehran. Ahmed Qavam long has been friendly toward the Soviet Union.

The council heard Taqizadeh after debating for an hour whether to take up an Albanian request for U.N.O. membership and finally deciding to delay action for the moment.

Greece Backs Up Britain.

The Greek Ambassador to Great Britain, A. Aghnides, filed with the Council a statement by the Greek Foreign Affairs Committee supporting the presence of British troops in Greece.

Earlier Greek Foreign Minister John. Sophianopoulos suggested that Britain and Russia hold direct talks to settle the Russian protest to the Council that the presence of British troops in Greece was endangering world security. The Russian complaint was a similar one by the Soviet Ukraine against the British in Indonesia are scheduled to be taken up by the Council after the Iranian issue.

CALIFORNIA MOVE WOULD DELAY U.S.
TEST SUIT ON OIL

Edwin W. Pauley, as Under Secretary of the Navy. At both hearings Pauley's activities in the tidelands oil case are expected to be brought to light officially.

Kenny's brief is a detailed repetition of legal arguments suggested by state ownership of tidelands which he has circulated widely throughout the nation. In it he contends that the State of California always has had title to the tidelands (area between high and low tide) and the marginal sea (area between low tide seaward to the three-mile limit), that the courts have determined the issue more than 50 times in the past, that harbors, docks and wharves could be seized by the Federal Government in event of a decision against the states, and that the Department of Interior itself, prior to 1937 acknowledged state ownership.

Attorney General Tom Clark has stated that there was nothing in the Government's suit that involves state title to ports and harbors and land under navigable waters. Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes has said that the only real issue is ownership of petroleum beneath the tidelands and marginal sea, and that Kenny and others are seeking to hide this real issue by dragging in the "states' rights" controversy.

MANILA, Jan. 28 (AP)—The first defense witness for Lt. Gen. Masaharu Homma testified today that Gen. Jonathan Wainwright's surrender negotiations in 1942 were received coldly by the Japanese because "the American commander tried to deny he could order troops in the southern Philippines to capitulate."

Lt. Gen. Takeji Wachi, Homma's chief of staff during the battles for Bataan and Corregidor, told the United States military commission trying Homma that he advised the Japanese commander to "postpone" the surrender negotiations "until Wainwright made up his mind."

Wachi testified that Homma had instructed Japanese troops to treat prisoners in a "friendly spirit" and not to mistreat them. He also attempted to show that Homma had sought to preserve the lives of Filipino political leaders.

The witness said that high-ranking officers from imperial headquarters were frequent visitors to Homma's headquarters and advised Homma to "take stern measures against anti-Japanese elements in the Philippines."

Wachi took the stand after Maj. John H. Skeen Jr. of Baltimore, chief of defense counsel, had opened his case. The trial had been in recess for several days.

ARMY EXTENDS TIME TO GET YOUR OLD GRADE BACK

Experience during recent months has shown that most men discharged from the wartime Army desire more than 20 days to look around again in civilian life before deciding what they will do. Consequently the War Department has adopted a new regulation extending the period during which you can enlist in the Regular Army and retain the grade you held when discharged.

During the period February 1 through June 30, 1946, you can rejoin the Army within 90 days after honorable discharge and be enlisted in the grade you held when discharged.

This applies to all men physically and mentally qualified, who are now in the Army and those who have been discharged less than 90 days.

THERE's a good job waiting for you in the new peacetime Regular Army.

It's a steady job, with no uncertainty, no lay-offs. You get good pay and most of it is clear savings. You get family allowances for dependents. And under normal conditions you get a 30-day paid vacation every year.

You have excellent technical training in one or more of 200 skills and trades. And you have every opportunity for advancement to higher grades, with added pay.

A 3-year enlistment enables you to choose the overseas theater to which you wish to go, and also your branch of service, in the Air, Ground or Service Forces.

Most important of all, you can build financial security. The time you have already spent in the Armed Forces counts toward retirement at half pay for life after 20 years' service, or up to three-quarters pay after 30 years' service.

TAFT TO REQUEST
TRUMAN EXPLAIN
BUDGET, HE SAYS

Senator Terms President's Estimates for Year 'Masterpiece of Confusion.'

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Senator Taft (Rep.), Ohio, said today that President Truman's budget proposals need clarifying and he is going to ask the White House to explain them.

He noted that there is an item of three billion dollars and "no where is it possible to discover what that is for."

Also, Taft told a reporter, "there is no analysis" of a $1,750,000,000 item for international purposes. It can't be for the whole international field, he said, "because that runs up to 10 billion dollars."

Taft agreed with a statement by Senator Bridges (Rep.), New Hampshire, that many things appear to be omitted "and these things will run up the public debt." For that reason, Taft declared, "it is misleading" to say the debt will be cut in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Taft said he had been studying the budget all week and finds it "a masterpiece of confusion."

Bridges, ranking Republican on the Senate Appropriations Committee, called the President's budget "a masterpiece of deception," and said that instead of declining the public debt will rise $15,100,000,000 in the next 18 months.

He said the budget presentation was "a blueprint for continued waste of the taxpayers' and bond buyers' funds." He contended that the administration figures on cutting the gross national debt by reducing its cash balance was like drawing on a savings account to meet an overdraft on a checking account.

His statement said: "The President made every effort to have taxpayers believe that the Federal Government will grow financially stronger during the next 18 months of his administration. It will in fact become dangerously weaker."

LOYD I. MILLER

He also served two terms as recorder of deeds of Greene county and was Republican nominee for secretary of state of Missouri in 1940 and 1944.

He was appointed by Gov. Forest C. Donnell as penal director in 1941. In the campaign year of 1944, Attorney General Roy McKeltrick, then seeking nomination to the United States Senate, made charges against Miller's direction of the penitentiary. He complained that convicts had been permitted to spend money earned by them in prison jobs, which should have been set aside for their families.

McKiltrick charged also the improper use of food, household supplies and other state property by Miller and other prison officials. Miller denied the charges and said that in some of the matters cited he had acted on advice of the attorney general. McKiltrick filed a suit to recover $248,371 which he alleged had been mis-spent in the penal department. The former official is survived by his wife, his daughter, Patricia Miller McDaniel of Kansas City, and his mother, Mrs. William H. Miller of Springfield.

Miller caused a survey to be made of the penitentiary in 1943 by Lewis E. Lawes, former warden of Sing Sing prison, who recommended changes, most of them requiring legislation, such as a merit system of personnel.

In the campaign year of 1944, Attorney General Roy McKeltrick, then seeking nomination to the United States Senate, made charges against Miller's direction of the penitentiary. He complained that convicts had been permitted to spend money earned by them in prison jobs, which should have been set aside for their families.

McKiltrick charged also the improper use of food, household supplies and other state property by Miller and other prison officials. Miller denied the charges and said that in some of the matters cited he had acted on advice of the attorney general. McKiltrick filed a suit to recover $248,371

STEEL MILL PICKET LINES PART FOR PRIEST, MINISTER

GARY, Ind., Jan. 28 (AP)—Steel mill picket lines parted momentarily yesterday to permit a Roman Catholic priest and a Presbyterian minister to conduct services in a struck plant.

The Rev. Thomas Coffey of the Oblate Mission house and the Rev. F. W. Backemeyer of First Presbyterian Church entered the Gary works of the Carnegie-Illinois Steel Corp. They led separate services in a plant garage for grimy-faced supervisors clad in overalls and mackinaws.

The men have been in the plant constantly since start of the CIO strike early last Monday. Relief was provided by the plant management to permit their attendance at a mass this morning and a Protestant service this afternoon.

MOVE TO OMIT FORD SITE FROM AREA ANNEXED

Florissant Mayor to Ask Council to Rescind Action Involving Tract for New Plant.

Mayor Arthur F. Bangert of Florissant said today he would recommend to the city council tonight that it eliminate the site of the proposed $8,000,000 Ford Motor Co. assembly plant north of Lambert Field from the 600-acre tract annexed by the city last Dec. 28.

This would leave approximately 500 acres still within the corporate limits of Florissant. The Ford site occupies about 99 acres in the southwest corner of the area, which the city council took over under authority of a special charter granted in 1937.

Various residents in the territory, considering legal action to set aside the annexation, have consulted John E. Mooney, Clayton attorney. No positive action has been taken yet.

Mayor Bangert's proposed action was determined, he said, after he received a letter last Saturday from Daniel Bartlett, attorney for the Ford company, detailing the company's objections to the annexation.

The principal objection was to the added tax burden without corresponding benefits. The writer declared the company would provide its own sewage disposal plant, its own utilities and a private plant protection system even if the city of Florissant were equipped to furnish these services.

Answering the argument that incorporation would provide a better environment for the plant through zoning regulations, Bartlett said the plant would be one of the most modern and beautiful in America and that Ford executives felt the development around the plant would be of a corresponding nature without the need of zoning laws.

The letter concluded with the statement that the Ford management was greatly disturbed over the action and suggested that the corporation was not irrevocably committed to construction of the plant since only grading has been completed.

9 KILLED, 38 HURT IN HANGAR FIRE AT ARMY FIELD

way through smoke and flames in a frantic effort to escape into the 18-degree temperature outside.

At least 25 of them were carried down ladders by firemen of 17 companies who battled the inferno. Some leaped as far as 30 feet to the ground. Still others reached the four fire escapes of the building, an old residence with a large three-story addition which once served as a hospital. Cause of the fire has not been determined.

George Lindsay, whose mother escaped from a third-floor apartment, told of watching two trapped victims perish in the flames behind windows which had been barred as a precaution against burglars.

"We watched them break out the window glass," he said. "They screamed and tore at the bars. One stopped to tear off his clothing which caught fire. Then, they just burned to death while we watched helplessly."

The dead were Robert O'Dell, 5 years old; Mrs. Rena Hubbard, 50, and her daughter Shirley, 13; Mrs. Mildred Rupe, 26, and her daughters, Loretta Lucille, 2, and Doris Evelyn, 5; Charles Kraus, 47, and Mrs. Alice Watkins, 23, and her children, Robert Tarber, 4, and Lorraine Tarber, 3.

Clifford L. Watkins, a railroad clerk, was almost incoherent with grief as he told how he climbed out on a top-floor window ledge and, calling for help, was assisted down a hastily erected ladder before he could make a fireman understand his family was trapped. Firemen then tried to reach the Watkins apartment but were turned back by flames and smoke.

3 Killed in Fire "Set by Child Playing With Matches."

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—Three persons were killed yesterday in a lower East Side tenement fire which the fire marshal said was started by a 3-year-old boy playing with a match.

The blaze destroyed the six-story building, damaged adjoining structures and drove 325 lightly-clad persons outside in 19-degree weather shortly before 10 a.m.

The child was said to have set fire to window curtains as he played in a first floor apartment of the tenement at 277 Madison street. His mother, in the kitchen at the time, carried him to safety when she discovered the quickly-spreading flames.

A dog's barking was credited with helping some tenants to escape from the building. The dog barking when he saw smoke curling under the door aroused his master, who spread the alarm.

Two Women Burn to Death in Chicago Apartment Fire, CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP)—Two women died of burns and another was injured when fire drove 50 residents of the Humboldt apartment hotel from the building yesterday.

Two women, one tentatively identified as Miss Carol Smith, and Miss Sylvia Hirsch, who was identified by a relative, died in the rooms they occupied in the building.

Mrs. Lena Heland, 35 years old, was injured when she jumped from a second story window into a fire net. Eight others were taken down ladders by firemen.

SOCIAL SECURITY EXPANSION FOR VETERANS URGED

Agency Suggests Credits Be Extended for Time Spent in Armed Forces.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Expansion of the social security program to provide veterans with insurance credits for time spent in uniform was recommended by the Federal Security Agency today.

This was urged as part of a broader national system of social insurance outlined in the Social Security Board's annual report to Congress.

In addition to old-age and survivor's insurance credits for veterans for time spent in service, the board recommended:

1. Federal insurance against medical care costs, including payments to doctors and hospitals.

2. Establishment of a single national program of unemployment insurance to replace existing federal-state programs.

3. Extension of jobless benefit rights to all employees in industries currently covered, and to as many non-covered groups "as is administratively feasible."

4. Maximum weekly unemployment benefits "of at least $25 payable for up to 26 weeks."

5. Expansion of the old-age and survivors' insurance program to cover "all gainful workers," including agricultural, domestic and public service employees, as well as those in business for themselves.

6. Liberalization of these benefits, particularly for low-paid workers.

7. Benefit payments for both permanent and temporary disabilities.

8. Expansion of federal-state programs of general public assistance to cover "all needy persons . . . and so that payments may be more adequate."

In urging a more comprehensive national social security program, the board said:

"It would be designed to close existing gaps in the coverage of both persons and risks, and to remove present inequities in the protection of workers and the financial burdens of employers. . . . It would greatly strengthen protection against want and dependency at a minimum cost."

Under the old-age insurance program the board urged that the qualifying age for all women be set at 60 rather than 65.

It also called for an increase from $3000 to $3600 a year in the amount of earnings subject to contribution and counted in the calculation of benefits.

PATTERSON HOPES TO SPEED RETURN OF SOME TROOPS

Thinks Men in India-Burma and Middle East Theaters Can Be Home Before June 30.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Secretary of War Patterson said today he believes it will be possible to speed up the withdrawal of United States troops from the India-Burma and Middle East theaters and discharge all men now there prior to the previously set June 30 deadline.

Patterson just back from a world inspection trip of Army installations, told a press conference that only a few hundred men will be retained for air transport operations in the India-Burma and Middle East theaters.

The Secretary said also that negotiations are in progress looking to dispatch of a British Commonwealth force, including Australians, to assist in the occupation of Japan, under command of Gen. Douglas MacArthur.

An announcement of the result of the negotiations is expected in a few days, he added.

Won't Affect Schedule. Asked about a report that 40,000 Australian and possibly other troops would be sent to Japan to reinforce American forces, he said that neither the proposed speedup of evacuation of the "secondary theaters" nor the proposed British Commonwealth reinforcements in Japan would have an "appreciable effect" on War Department estimates of a total Army force of 1,500,000 needed by June 30.

Patterson said that if a peace treaty can be made with Italy before June 30, he believed most American troops could be evacuated promptly from that country.

Current War Department schedules call for reduction of the troops in Burma-India from 55,000 on Jan. 1 to 40,000 by June 30, and in the Middle East from 18,000 to 50,000.

The schedules call for a reduction in Italy from 51,000 on Jan. 1 to 28,000 by June 30.

Patterson said his four-week trip convinced him of the need of closing out less active theaters with the greatest promptness.

As to Philippine Scouts. He said that he had recommended that renewed efforts be made to revive the Philippine scouts in the Philippines, by increasing the pay from 18 to 50 pesos ($25) per month. The War Department had sought to raise 50,000 scouts but Patterson said only 200 had been recruited because of the low pay.

The War Department reported, meanwhile, that from May 12, 1945, through Jan. 25, 1946, a total of 5,538,000 Army personnel have been returned to civilian life. Of this number, 4,939,000 have been released since V-J day. From Jan. 1 through Jan. 25 a total of 790,000 were demobilized and for the week ended Jan. 25, 185,000.

Since V-E day, 23,779 doctors, 6271 dentists and 32,395 nurses have been released.

Strike as Negotiation Aid. Wage boosts won at Ford and Chrysler resulted, Reuther asserted, from "the determined stand of the General Motors strikers, supported by the solidarity of other workers."

Union officers said today 3000 tool and die makers in 65 small shops in the Detroit area laid down General Motors work as scheduled. The UAW executive board authorized the move two weeks ago to increase pressure on the strike-bound corporation.

Blaine Marrin, financial secretary-treasurer, one of the affected locals, said more exact figures on the men and plants involved and the effect on G.M.C. reconversion would be available tomorrow. There was no comment from the company.

Mrs. Nell G. Watts, 4931 Lindell boulevard, obtained a divorce from Lawson M. Watts, vice president of the First National Bank, in Circuit Judge William B. Flynn's court today.

Mrs. Watts who alleged general indignities, testified that she was married Dec. 2, 1925 at Crown Point, Ind., and separated last March 1. She was granted $375 a month alimony. Watts was represented by counsel but did not contest.

Flashes of Life

Presto!
By the Associated Press.
CHELSEA, Mass.: Kenneth L. Knight, USCG, S-3-C, is convinced "the hand is quicker than the eye." He told police he placed his wrist watch, valued at $77, on a restaurant table to wind it. He turned back and presto! The watch was gone.

Man of Words.
SYRACUSE, Kan.: Auctioneer W. H. Straney has a hoarse throat today. The reason: At 1 p.m. Friday he began a livestock sale at Elkhart, finishing at 2:30 a.m. Saturday. At 1 p.m. Saturday he opened another sale which lasted until 7:30 a.m. Sunday.

Editor's Dream.
BREWSTER, Minn.: Clinton Wilcox, publisher of the weekly Brewster Tribune, was ill for several days. When he read the latest issue of the Tribune, he found a full page ad paid for by Brewster residents, with this message: "Get well quick, Mr. Editor!"

ASYLUM DOCTORS ARRESTED FOR DEATH OF 450 IN SAXONY

BERLIN, Jan. 28 (AP)—Police announced yesterday arrest of two physicians in connection with the killing of 450 patients, more than 350 of them children, at an asylum in Uchtspringe, Saxony, between 1941 and 1945.

Previously they had arrested three asylum nurses, who, the police said, admitted they fed the patients sleeping tablets on orders from their superiors.

WAR TOOK HEAVY TOLL OF WHALES, AUKS, GULLS, DUCKS

Extent of Wildlife Loss Still Uncertain—Some Beneficial Results.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The Interior Department reported yesterday that "thousands of augs, murrelets, puffins, sea gulls and ducks" perished during the war along with "unknown quantities of whales."

The augs, murrelets, etc., were victims of oil on the sea, "which penetrates the feathers and ruins them as waterproof coverings."

The report on wildlife casualties was published in the annual accounting of the work done by various agencies in the department headed by Harold L. Ickes.

Other points it touched on included: 1. Continental fish and wildlife may well have benefited by the curtailment on hunting and fishing during the war.

2. De-jungleizing of Pacific islands destroyed many nesting grounds for sea birds "and has perhaps even extinguished at least two species, the Laysan island rail and Laysan island finch."

3. It will take at least five years to determine the extent of war-caused losses of offshore wildlife "and to effectuate measures for recovery wherever the possibilities of recovery appear hopeful."

4. The war pulled a lot of men out of the fish and wildlife service and here is a good field for "returned war veterans seeking to establish themselves in civilian life."

INSPECTION OF EATING PLACES BEGINS IN UNIVERSITY CITY

An inspection of University City's 52 eating and drinking establishments was begun today by Health Commissioner Walter R. Hewitt and members of his staff to enforce a clean restaurant ordinance passed last Oct. 24.

Hewitt said establishments inspected would be classified and graded on the basis of standards set up under the United States Public Health Service code. Owners of establishments where unacceptable standards prevail will be given a "reasonable time" to correct them, Hewitt said.

Six St. Louis county municipalities have passed clean restaurant ordinances. A public hearing will be held tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at City Hall on the clean restaurant bill pending before the St. Louis Board of Aldermen. Health Commissioner Joseph F. Bredeck and various civic groups have opposed the present bill because it fails to conform to provisions of the United States Public Health Service model ordinance.

OPERATING PLAN OF FOUNDATION IN THE RAMSEY CASE

Tax-Exempt Organization Raising Funds for New York U. Is Run on a Fee Basis.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28.—Recent acquisition of the Ramsey Accessories Manufacturing Corp. of St. Louis by a tax-exempt organization engaged in raising funds for New York University Schools of Medicine and Law has directed attention to the Robinson Foundation here.

The foundation, organized in 1941 to conduct cancer and other scientific research, thus conforming to requirements of the internal revenue code for federal income tax exemption, is said to have served as model in certain phases for other groups, such as the Ramsey Corp., operating businesses on a tax-exempt basis.

One interesting phase of the Robinson Foundation enterprises, consisting of two New Jersey firms and one Los Angeles plant, is that they are operated on a fee basis by a firm of industrial advisors, Continental Industries, Inc. Ernest Jarvis, president of the managerial concern, which has no connection with the foundation except to direct its business affairs, asserted that Continental fees were less than 1 per cent of net profit earned by the foundation's factories.

81-Bed Hospital Maintained.

These factories provide from $20,000 to $25,000 a month to the foundation, Jarvis said, describing them as the Hatfield Wire & Cable Division, Hillside, N. J.; the Well-Davit & Bolt Division, Perth Amboy, and the Leach Relay Co. Division, manufacturers of electrical devices at Los Angeles. With these proceeds, contributions from private sources and fees, the Robinson Foundation maintains an 81-bed, 25-crib hospital, estimating visiting patients at about 5000 a month. It also conducts extensive research, Jarvis said.

He pointed out that the foundation's accounting of receipts and expenditures, including salaries and expenses, are made regularly to the Bureau of Internal Revenue, where decision on tax exemption is made. Although the foundation does not issue financial statements or other credit-rating information, Jarvis estimated that the total cost of administering the foundation was less than $75,000 annually for all salaries, directors' fees, wages, legal fees and other items. Total salaries, including those of officers and employees as well as the income of the founder, George P. Robinson, do not exceed $30,000 annually, he said.

"Those salaries and other expenses incumbent on running the foundation and conducting the business of its firms, are subject to the scrutiny of the Internal Revenue Bureau," he added, "and must meet the primary requirement of being 'reasonable sums.'"

No-Dividend Capital Stock.
The $1000 capital stock, on which no dividends may be declared, is held almost entirely by Robinson. A spokesman for the law firm of Wilkie, Owen, Otis, Farr & Gallagher, representing the Robinson Foundation, said there was no manner by which any director, stockholder, officer or employee of the organization could profit beyond legal, reasonable compensation for services.

Robinson, president, son of a prominent New Jersey physician, sponsored the foundation as a memorial to his father, the attorney. One of its chief purposes is to determine the importance of diet in treatment and prevention of cancer, he said. Other directors are Irving Fisher, Yale economist; Mae A. Schurr, vice president; George C. Warner, retired attorney, and H. W. Joyce, certified public accountant, secretary-treasurer.

14 MORE OF GRAF SPEE CREW ESCAPE FROM PRISON CAMP

BUENOS AIRES, Jan. 28 (AP).—Santa Fe police said today that 14 former crewmen of the German pocket battleship Admiral Graf Spee escaped from a camp at Villa de Guadalupe where they were interned with 66 others.

Several other interned Graf Spee crewmen escaped two weeks ago from a camp in Mendoza province and still are at liberty. The Germans have been interned since the Graf Spee was scuttled at the mouth of the Plata river in December, 1939, after a running fight with three British cruisers.

FIRE IN COAL CAR DELAYS M'ARTHUR BRIDGE TRAFFIC

Traffic on Douglas MacArthur bridge was halted for about 30 minutes last night while East St. Louis firemen and a Missouri Pacific Railroad engine equipped with fire-fighting equipment extinguished a blaze in a gondola car partly filled with coal on the eastern end of the bridge.

Fire-fighting equipment was lowered to the railroad deck to put out the fire, which spread to the railroad ties. Minor damage to the ties did not prevent resumption of rail traffic, police said.

U. S. AGREES TO PAY 20 1-4C A POUND FOR NATURAL RUBBER

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—The State Department announced today completion of price negotiations for purchase of natural rubber from British, Dutch and French areas in the Far East.

The price was fixed at 20 1/4 cents a pound for standard top grades, delivered free on board ocean-going steamers at far eastern ports. Under terms of the agreement the Reconstruction Finance Corporation subsidiary, the Rubber Development Corporation, will buy all rubber in those areas allocated to the United States by the combined rubber committee. The agreement with the Dutch and French is for the period Sept. 2, 1945, through June 30, 1946. The British agreement is for the period Sept. 2 through March 31, 1946. Substantial quantities of rubber already have been shipped from British areas, the announcement said.

HYDE PARK TO BE INSPECTED AGAIN AS U. N. O. CAPITAL SITE

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP).—The United Nations site inspection committee planned to take another look today at Hyde Park and Kingston, N. Y., as possibilities for "the capital of the world."

The re-examination was prompted, said Dr. Stoyan Gavrilovic, committee chairman, by a new offer of 15 acres on the Kingston side of the Hudson river and 25 on the Hyde Park side to supplement the late President Roosevelt's estate. Dr. Gavrilovic said his group felt at least 40 square miles would be needed. He said the committee had not recommended any single site but had listed as "favorable, more favorable or less favorable" the places so far considered.

NEW YORK, Jan. 28 (AP)—
The New York stock market was buoyed by the improved labor situation, stocks bulged one to more than six points, many to 5-year peaks, in today's market in the fastest sprint since 1940.

Heavy bidding was inspired mainly by the Ford-Chrysler wage agreements which not only were expected to set a pattern for the steel strike and other widespread disputes, but also to accentuate the wage-price inflationary spiral.

Talk of a steel strike within a few days spurred speculative and investment participation.
The ticker tape was behind during most of the first hour as 1000 to 50,000 share blocks changed hands on the upside. Turnover in the initial period was 1,000,000 shares, best in almost six years.

The pace slowed now and then after midday, although speed-ups were frequent. While many favorites held around the top near the close, quotations were reduced and there by profit takers.

Transfers were 3,480,000 shares, compared with 1,760,000 Friday.
Eastman Up 10 Points.

The Associated Press average of 50 stocks reached a new 15-year high at 80.2 on rise of 1.8 points.
The industrial group rose 2.5 points. All groups made new 1945
highs.

It was a very broad market. Of the 1039 issues traded today, 839 were higher, 103 lower, and 97 unchanged. There were 258 new 94-46 highs and one new low.

Filled up orders brought late starts for U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler and other pivots with some posting widest jumps for the day. Eastman Kodak climbed 10 points on a few transactions.

Ahead were Republic Steel, Fountainhead Sheet, General Motor, Studebaker, Packard, Continental Motors, Standard Oil of Indiana, General Electric, Goodrich, U. S. Rubber, Electric Power & Light, Western Union "A", Sears Roebuck, Montgomery Ward,
International Harvester, Douglas Equipment, Kennecott, Standard Oil of N. J., Allied Chemical, Johnson & Johnson, Commonwealth & Southern, Columbia Gas and United Corp.

Gainers on the Curb.
Among foreign and domestic were General Finance, Aluminum of America, Humble Oil, Brown
Rubber and Cities Service.

Financial quarters indulged in considerable guessing regarding company dividend actions to be taken by U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors and Chrysler.

"Big Steel" directors meet after tomorrow's close and predictions regarding declaration or reduction of the regular dividend were being evened out by the market.

It was suggested that the usual $4 dividend might not have been fully earned. It was stressed, however, that the corporation's reserves were large, in addition to substantial carry-backs this year, and the long-term outlook was believed exceptionally promising.

CIO RULES ON JURISDICTION IN MONTGOMERY WARD STORES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The CIO jurisdictional committee ruled yesterday that the United Retail, Wholesale and Department Store Employees of America should have exclusive jurisdiction in the Montgomery Ward chain and other mail order chains.

The Montgomery Ward chain is now partly organized by the CIO United Retail and Wholesale Union, and partly by the CIO International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union.

The committee also ruled that warehouses owned and operated by retailers or wholesalers for their own exclusive use are an integral part of such retail or wholesale business, and should be organized by the retail and wholesale employees' union. Exclusive jurisdiction in public warehouses which may be CIO-organized was given the longshoremen's union.

'WE WANT TO GO HOME' STRIKE BY 6000 AT R.A.F. INDIAN BASE

NEW DELHI, Jan. 28 (AP)—Approximately 6000 Royal Air Force personnel, including about 1000 Indians, were reported today to have halted work at two air stations in Cawnpore, biggest R. A. F. maintenance center in India, to emphasize "we want to go home" demands.

The strike began Saturday, but representatives of the strikers met yesterday and offered to resume work for 10 days if they were satisfied that full publicity had been given to their demands. These included a speedup in demobilization, trebling of shipping allocations for repatriation, more information on sailing dates and greater use of naval shipping.

Twelve hundred R.A.F. men who had gone on strike at midnight Friday at a Calcutta airfield were reported to have agreed to return to work tonight. At Singapore, R.A.F. personnel at Seletar air base called off a strike after Air Marshall Sir Keith Park, air commander in chief, urged the Air Ministry in London to speed discharges and improve conditions at the field.

He is living at 114 Trevillian avenue, Glendale. He was sent to the South Pacific for six months in 1942 and since his return has headed the San Diego center, which has averaged 12,000 patients during that time.

ATTLEE ADVISER URGES END OF CENSORSHIP, PROPAGANDA

LONDON, Jan. 28 (AP)—Prime Minister Attlee's new public relations adviser, Francis Williams, says "less secrecy and more positive information" is needed about international relations as a contribution "to the working of democracy."

Williams, Britain's wartime controller of news and censorship, has published a book in which he advocated "a general international agreement by governments not to subsidize news services nor to 'use them in any way as instruments of propaganda.'"

The book, "Press, Parliament and People," advocates an early end to all censorship, declaring that news is "the raw material for ideas and in the world of news and ideas there should be no frontiers."

Hitler's Official Biographer, Rhapsodic in 1933 Book, Eats His Words in Revised Version

Now Writes, for American-Run Paper, That Fuehrer Was of Illegitimate Birth, Implies
He Was of Slavic Descent, Impugns His Battlefield Record, Calls Him a Paranoiac.

By RICHARD L. STOKES
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MUNICH, Jan. 28 (By Radio).

THE scene was the great Voelkischer Beobachter plant in this city, once the printing center of the National Socialist party. From its presses rolled the first and all subsequent editions of "Mein Kampf." Here as editor in chief toiled Alfred Rosenberg, now a defendant in the Nuremberg trial.

The ace Nazi publisher Max Amann languishes today in a prison camp in his chair sits Capt. Hans Habe author of "Thousands Must Fall" and Hungarian-born son-in-law of millionaire John Davies. Habe served brilliantly in the French and then the American Army but is proud of having discovered and blazoned the fact that Hitler's true name was Schickelgruber.

Under Habe's direction are issued four publications edited by Americans in the German language. These are the newspaper called Die Neue Zeitung, a monthly picture magazine Heuer, a compilation modeled after the Reader's Digest and entitled Die Neue Auesee, and a cultural magazine of Atlantic Monthly type called Die Amerikanische Rundschau. They have a combined circulation in the United States zone of 2,317,850 and are to be distinguished from scores of German language newspapers which are edited by Germans under American supervision.

A Lackey Journalist

Capt. Habe looked curiously at the little man who sat opposite him.

The stranger was wrapped in a resplendent fur coat. A monocle hung to one eye. His smile was ingratiating and demure. He was seeking the visitor explained, a job as reporter. He could write dramatic, colorful articles. The stipend was of no importance. Perhaps his name was not so familiar. He produced a visiting card bearing the inscription, "Erich Czech-Jochberg."

Erich Czech-Jochberg!

The guttural syllables rang a bell in Capt. Habe's memory. Could it be possible that this small, sly creature was the Fuehrer's official biographer, the author whose groveling volume, "Hitler—A German Movement," sold hundreds of thousands of copies in the early thirties?

So, strangely enough it proved to be. Habe swallowed and stared. Then came an inspiration. Would Herr Czech-Jochberg consider writing a new Hitler biography, a brief one this time, for Die Neue Zeitung?

The result was electrical. The author sprang to his feet like a man inspired. The idea was colossal. In fact for a long time he had pondered it himself. How many pages? Certainly he could have the piece ready the next day.

Capt. Habe has furnished the Post-Dispatch with parallel citations from the 1933 and 1946 versions as illustrating the cynical lack of character bred by Nazi morality.

Britain, Russia In Open Test of World Power

Reds' Expansionist Aims Collide at Many Points With English Interests.

LONDON, Jan. 28.

A SHARP exchange of snarls and growls the last few days has served notice on other inhabitants of the world jungle that the Lion and the Bear are still involved in their ancient antagonism. Russia's open challenge to British activities in Greece and Indonesia was primarily political maneuver to cover Russian activities in Iran. But it was a lot more than that, too. It meant that Russia was prepared to make open issue, politically, with the only other European power which might be capable of restraining Russia's ambitions in Europe and the Middle East.

The Russians made their first open move in a calculated and systematic attempt to "whittle Britain down to its right size" and, incidentally, build themselves up to what they consider their right size. It seemed to serve notice on the world that its one big problem in the years to come, would be to referee this quarrel to a peaceful conclusion.

Clash of Interests

There are many veteran diplomats who feel that the job will be extremely tough. In the opinion of these people, Russia's ambitions are so extensive that they cannot be satisfied without such serious encroachments on Britain's established interests that Britain will have to resist them. These interests are both political and material and, in some cases, they are shared by other nations, including the United States.

Some of Russia's ambitions have been voiced, others are being kept in reserve until the time when they can be put forward without causing too violent a reaction.

By its activities in Iran, Russia has convinced the western powers that it is out to assume the role which Britain has played in the Middle East for the last century. How far Russia can go is a problem of enough food and a seat for his wife's head. Perhaps, though I doubt it, he subscribed to the Vienna Extra Blatt. But a library? Certainly not!

Hitler's Battle Record

The early biography contained an eloquent account of how Hitler was blinded by gas on the battlefield. But now it is written: "Hundreds of men from Hitler's alleged unit in the regiment are running about Munich. Not one knew Hitler as a soldier. Not one ever saw him at the front."

In the new biography the Fuehrer is diagnosed as paranoiac. By way of symptoms of epilepsy are cited "his immeasurable, over-towering egotism, his extreme irritability, his rolling on the floor and biting carpets." In the old account there is a fulsome eulogy of Hitler's "unique and kindly heart which beats for Germany and embraces an entire people."

That, wrote Czech-Jochberg in 1933, "is the significance of the German miracle, Adolf Hitler."

Munich Bomb Plot Faked to Halt Peace Movement, General Says

By DANIEL DE LUCE

NUREMBERG, Jan. 28 (AP).

REINHARD HEYDRICH, the assassinated "hangerman" of Bohemia-Moravia, was charged yesterday by a bitter enemy on the German Army general staff with planning the 1939 beer cellar explosion in Munich in order to shatter a peace movement among high army officers.

Heydrich was accused by Gen. Georg Thomas in a statement to American authorities of stage-managing the deadly drama while Hitler was safely absent.

A bomb exploded in the Burgerbrau in Munich on Nov. 8, 1939, killing eight obscure Nazi party members, shortly after Hitler and high party leaders left. Hitler had just commemorated the sixteenth anniversary of the abortive Munich putsch with a bitter speech against Britain.

not carry out their plans until five years later when the 1944 plot to assassinate Hitler failed, and Witzleben and several other high army officers were executed.

Former Finance Minister Hjalmar Schacht, one of the defendants in the war crimes trial, has requested Thomas as a defense witness. Thomas has named Schacht as one of a handful of prominent German civilians who supported a small clique of the Nazi general staff considering in the late summer of 1939 "how to stop Hitler." Both Schacht and Thomas were imprisoned at Dachau after the 1944 assassination failure, for which Thomas claims no responsibility but about which Schacht hinted he had a behind-the-scenes role.

BILL FOR JOBLESS BENEFITS TO VETERANS IN STRIKES

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP).—Revision of the G.I. bill of rights to permit striking veterans to receive unemployment benefits was proposed today by Senator Myers (Dem., Pennsylvania).

He declared a provision of that act is depriving some veterans of benefits which a civilian receives. "Under state laws," he said in a statement "striking workers may receive unemployment compensation after five weeks but the veteran must wait until he has exhausted the allowances under the G.I. bill."

One section of that bill disqualifies a veteran from receiving readjustment benefits if it is found that his unemployment is due to a strike in which he might benefit by the settlement.

Harrison Tarrins in Chungking. CHUNGKING, Jan. 28 (AP).—Ambassador W. Averell Harriman, United States envoy to Russia, delayed his departure from Chungking today after a long conference with Gen. George C. Marshall, special United States envoy to China, and a banquet at Chiang Kai-shek's presidential villa. Harriman stopped here en route to the United States.

Czech Catholics Strongly Support Leftist Swing of Their Country

SECOND OF SERIES.
(Copyright, 1946.)

By MAURICE HINDUS.

TWO members of the Prague Cabinet, a Communist and a Catholic, were driving by the building in which the future Parliament is to be housed.

The Communist said to the Catholic: "I suppose, Monseigneur, your party will be occupying the seats on the right of the house?"

"Not at all," replied the Catholic, "Why not, Monseigneur?"

"Because we Czech Catholics do not belong to the Right. Nor do we belong to the Center. We belong to the right of the Left."

The fact is that the Czech Catholics as a body are the most radical Catholics in the world. The anti-Fascist record of the Czech Catholic clergy throughout the years of the German occupation has elicited the praise of the whole nation. I have yet to hear of Czech Catholic priests who were collaborators. About 100 of them were executed or lost their lives in concentration camps.

Supported Nationalism.

Not only are the Czech Catholics irreconcilably anti-Fascist, but in their social and economic thinking they are more socialistic than any Catholic party in postwar Europe. They support the nationalization of the state, the title of their leading daily newspaper is "People's Democracy," a phrase by which Socialists and Communists all over Europe designate the new democracy they are sponsoring in distinction from the older, or so-called bourgeois democracy.

In "People's Democracy," on Nov. 24, there appeared these significant words: "After six years of war, socialism is on a victorious march, and its purpose is to bring material welfare to all."

In explaining the type of socialism he had in mind, the author wrote: "We know two streams of socialism—materialist and Christian. No doubt materialist socialism is lacking neither in plans nor in fighting spirit. But time, evolution, the biological realities of human life will confirm the truth of the view that the spirit"

Restraints on Britain.

In addition to these positive intentions, Russia has certain negative ones aimed directly at Britain's position.

First, it has announced time and again that it will not tolerate a "western European bloc." This term, as interpreted by Russia, covers a multitude of things. It certainly covers any attempt by Britain to form a coalition of Western Europe into a bloc anywhere near as close-knit as Russia's bloc in Eastern Europe. Also, Russia has shown a determination to undermine British prestige in areas where it has always been great and where it might conceivably be great again. Greece and Indonesia are two examples. Less obviously, Russian influence opposes the British in

MATTER OF FACT

Truman Pulls Things Together

By JOSEPH and STEWART ALSOP

WASHINGTON.

AS this is written, the outlook for a solution of the labor crisis appears much brighter. The President has got his first breaks, after a long series of disappointments which might well have shattered the confidence of Mr. Micawbar. It is hard to believe that other breaks will not follow.

Meanwhile, the crisis itself has produced one good result. It has led to a determined attempt to pull the Administration together. In the tension of the 10 days just past, such an attempt was no doubt inevitable. Certainly it bodes well for the future.

Before examining what has been done, it will be well to present the reasons why action was needed at all.

The logical place to begin is the President; for at the heart of Truman's troubles is Truman himself. With his good intentions, he has been defeatist about his task. Despite his strong sense of duty, he has told all and sundry that he did not want the job, which has hardly strengthened his power of leadership. He has gone to lengths in doing this which have actually threatened to destroy his power of leadership altogether, by convincing those who see him that he means, in 1948, to hand over the poisoned chalice of the presidency to another man.

Enviably Lescot

One sample of these presidential manifestations is perhaps apocryphal but characteristic. On being informed by a State Department official of the revolution in Haiti, Truman is supposed to have inquired into the fate of President Lescot. When he was told Lescot was in the lockup, he is reported to have answered: "Well, I've just come from another labor conference, and jail seems like a hell of a good place to be."

Other stories are better authenticated. To a Missouri caller, he spoke with such feeling about his unhappy lot that the Missourian, bursting with self-importance, told all and sundry in Washington that the President would not run again. This episode was sufficiently serious to force Postmaster General Hannegan to go to the White House and ask for a flat denial.

A man in such a mood is not the man who can ride the whirlwind and command the waves to cease to rage. Furthermore, as has been pointed out, the President has had a weak staff, and an administration rent by internal dissension. Even if he desired to, the Pres-

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Wants More ICCs

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In the present wave of industrial strife, the leaders on both sides continue to demand a free right to fight to a finish without regard to who gets hurt or how fair the decision.

Many years ago, the railroads were engaged in rate wars equally bitter and disastrous. The principle of the Government's duty to make the rules of economic competition and to depend on duly elected representatives of the people to adjust rates and rules fairly, was then first resorted to on a large scale. It has worked well. It has been expanded by demand of the citizens.

This labor strife is another case of economic competition. Competition is like fire—an excellent servant and a terrible master. Unrestrained and unregulated, it can ruin.

I believe it is the duty of our Congress to enact laws to govern it, laws backed by all the powers of Government and not dependent on oratorical contests at negotiation tables.

As under the Interstate Commerce Act, a governing body should have full power to examine all facts and should require all members in one industry to abide by the same rules, and all major industries to have fair wages and fair selling prices and selling methods that are not unduly expensive.

M. D. G.

Strikes and Aesop's Dog

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

I am wondering whether the situation of our striking labor unions could be likened to that of Aesop's dog in La Fontaine's "The Dog That Dropped the Substance for the Shadow."

This world is full of shadow-chasers. Most easily deceived are these racers. Should I enumerate these racers, I should not be believed.

I send them all to Aesop's dog. Which, crossing water on a log, Espied the meat he bore, below; To seize its image, let it go; Plunged in; to reach the shore was glad.

With neither what he hoped, nor what he'd had.

EARL S. SWARTZBAUGH.

Congressmen Should Hear

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

The Post-Dispatch can render a valuable public service by suggesting to people who pay rent that they write immediately to their Senators and Representatives, urging that rental ceilings, and ceilings on essential articles of food and clothing, be continued for at least a year from the expiration date of the law next June 30.

If this is not done, millions of low-income people in our country would be unable to meet the excessive rental demands that will surely be made, resulting, perhaps, in the automatic eviction of many people from their homes. You, of course, realize the vital importance of this matter, and I trust that you may see fit to use the influence of your great newspaper to help bring about passage of the needed legislation at the earliest possible time.

J. L. SPERRY.

Labor and the School Board

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

In a recent Post-Dispatch, the Board of Education asked the public to judge if the custodians were entitled to an increase in wages. Did the board members ask the public's opinion when they raised Mr. Sullivan's salary from $7600 to $8500 a year in July, 1944?

In regard to being friendly to organized labor, why did they force the carpenters to strike last July after the War Labor Board had granted them an increase in wages? Far from being sympathetic with organized labor, the board is actually using public funds to fight organized labor.

GEORGE TOMLIN.

Favoritism Under GI Bill

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

What about the young man graduating from high school, ready for military service, but disqualified by the Army physicians? He is not entitled under the GI bill to enter college, and the colleges are filled and will only accept GI's.

The graduate, through no fault of his, must suffer the consequences, whereas he is entitled to higher education, too.

A. J. B.

To the Legion: No

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Please allow me to follow up on the fine letter written by a veteran, condemning the American Legion on its state of lethargy in important matters.

Several other ex-GI's and I decided that we would hold off joining a veterans' organization until we could make a fair choice. Well, we have seen enough to agree that none of us would select the very sedate (except when it comes to parties and conventions) American Legion.

We, too, like dressing up in a natty uniform occasionally. But what we need and desire is an organization with the intestinal fortitude to express itself openly on the many problems confronting us today.

ANOTHER VETERAN.

A Middle Way for Labor Peace

The country will rejoice over the wage settlements with the Ford and Chrysler companies. It will take particular satisfaction, we believe, in the fact that these settlements were arrived at without strikes, without Government fact-finding interference, but instead by the free, democratic process of collective bargaining. What is more, they were arrived at after weeks and months of serious negotiations, with each side making concessions and, seemingly, with an absence of rancor and abuse by either side.

Peaceful settlements having been reached with Kaiser, Ford and Chrysler, the country, we believe, will be justified in looking hopefully and expectantly to the leaders of the General Motors Corp. and to the leaders of the United Auto Workers for a settlement.

Effects of GM Strike

A peculiar responsibility rests upon both sides in the case of General Motors. Here there is a strike which is costing 200,000 workers millions of dollars in wages and, correspondingly, is costing the nation's purchasing power that amount. It is denying the consumers the trucks and cars which they want and seriously need. It is denying stockholders, both large and small, a return on their investments.

More importantly, the strike is denying other automobile manufacturers vitally-needed parts without which, it appears, they will shortly be forced to shut down. The Ford company has already laid off 15,000 employees for lack of parts supplied by General Motors, and it will be compelled to close down completely by Feb. 5 unless parts are forthcoming.

We do not presume to pass judgment on the merits of the question, but we believe it will be difficult for the disinterested observer to understand why it is impossible or inadvisable for General Motors to pay something in the neighborhood of the union's demand of 19½ cents when its smaller and less powerful competitor, Chrysler, already paying 1 cent more per hour, has agreed to pay an increase of 18½ cents, and when Ford, already paying a substantially higher wage than General Motors, namely 6 cents more an hour, is able to see its way clear toward paying an increase of 18 cents.

Extremism on Both Sides

It would seem that in the spread of 1½ cents between Ford's agreement at 18 cents and the 19½-cent figure in the General Motors strike, it should be possible for both sides, in their own interest and in the interest of the country's need for prompt postwar reconversion, to find a middle ground.

In saying this, we repeat the view we have previously expressed that efforts of the union, through its spokesman, Walter Reuther, to interfere in purely management problems of General Motors—such as the prices to be paid for its cars—are unreasonable and uncalled for. As it happens, General Motors has not asked for price increases; nevertheless, this and other managerial responsibilities must not be encroached upon by labor.

Realizing that, once a strike is started, passions run high in the heat of an industrial battle, we think the country has lost patience with violent charges and countercharges from both sides.

We doubt, for example, that General Motors has deliberately planned a war to the death with the intention of taking advantage of the carry-back provisions in the tax laws. We doubt, too, whether, as Philip Murray has charged, United States Steel is deliberately trying to destroy the union.

We think Mr. Fairless's remark on this point was pertinent when he said: "You don't destroy unions by offering them the highest wage increase in history."

On the other hand, there would seem to be no doubt but that, whatever the provocation, the representatives of General Motors were guilty at least at one stage of the negotiations of a feigned indifference, of resorting to abusive language and of failing to live up to the real spirit of collective bargaining. The country, we believe, is looking to Mr. Wilson and to Mr. Reuther to get together.

The Case of Steel

Similarly, we believe that in the case of United States Steel the country looks to Mr. Fairless and Mr. Murray and, in this case, to Mr. Truman as well, to bring an end to the strike. There seems to be little doubt—indeed, it has been admitted—that an increase, and a substantial increase, in the price of steel must be allowed by Mr. Truman. Whether the promised increase of approximately $4 per ton is too low or whether the demanded $7 per ton is too high, we do not pretend to know. We do believe that, as is the case in every instance of bargaining, there is a middle ground which can and should be found.

Mr. Fairless has recognized the need for a wage increase. Mr. Truman has recognized the need for a price increase. Mr. Truman has been reluctant to make that increase too great lest it cause the present controlled inflation to get out of control. Although we have disagreed with the President as to his methods, we honor him for his efforts to control inflation.

In the case of steel, however, a protracted strike would plainly be disastrous to the country's economy. Mr. Truman, therefore, has to choose between the danger of a long, continued steel strike and the danger of consenting to an increase in the price of steel. This latter danger will persist whether or not the Government seizes the steel plants.

This price increase—let us face the facts plainly—may be an inflationary factor. It is a hard choice. In the last analysis, we believe that, while danger exists in either course, there is less danger in conceding an increase in the price of steel and thereby bringing the steel strike to an end—an end agreed upon voluntarily by both sides and by the Government and without the uncertainties of Government seizure.

Taxing the Nation's Patience

When Mr. Truman and Mr. Fairless get together again, which they must do, Mr. Fairless must, in fairness to all concerned, remember that if the strike continues Government seizure will become, as we believe, almost inevitable. He should remember, too, and so should Mr. Truman, that the country is not likely very long to endure the spectacle of having the manufacture of steel, its most vital and essential product, indefinitely suspended.

Let Mr. Truman, Mr. Fairless and Mr. Murray get together and give the country the steel it needs for iceboxes, for railroads, for houses, for bridges and for a million and one other things.

dent's proposal for providing more medical and hospital facilities in rural areas.

The survey verifies the contention that economic status has much to do with the rate of illness. Persons earning less than $499 a year had 523 illnesses per thousand annually, the figures show, while those earning more than $1000 had 422 illnesses per thousand. These figures prove again the need for making medical services more readily available to persons of low income, as the President proposes to do by means of a compulsory health insurance system.

The Missouri report is a tough nut for the standpaters who contend that Americans have "the best medical care in the world" and that all plans for reducing the illness rate are sheer radicalism.

Back to Conservatism?

Ernest T. Weir is pleading with his fellow-Industrialists and business men throughout the country for a return of the Republican party to pure conservatism. He is urging that the best interests of the country "can be served by conservative government."

Mr. Roosevelt destroyed the old Democratic party, says Mr. Weir, "and made his hybrid New Deal the country's first radical party." And the GOP, instead of being its old conservative self, has tried to win converts among the New Deal following "by being halfway radical."

We should like to see Mr. Weir explain his idea and give it specific application. If the GOP goes back to pure conservatism, it would have to stand for repeal of scores of measures that have been passed since 1933. It would have to come out against social security, the Wagner Act, bank deposit insurance, stock and security market regulation, TVA, minimum wage law and numerous other New Deal innovations.

Of course, nothing would please the Democrats better than to have a GOP platform and candidate in 1948 asking for erasure from the books of laws which long ago have been accepted. It would be the quickest way for the GOP to commit suicide, which its leaders, despite Mr. Weir's suggestion, are not prepared to do.

Messrs. Landon, Willkie and Dewey, the last three GOP presidential candidates, swallowed most of the New Deal policies and the next GOP candidate will be forced to do the same. This political compulsion leaves the GOP in an unhappy philosophic position, from which no perfect rescue seems possible.

Outline of a Peace Policy

The Mirror of Public Opinion

Building world community awaits solution of problems between major powers, America and Russia, says newspaper editor; offers six-point peace plan to stop making atomic bombs, give Russia and Britain economic help and establish freedom of information.

Herbert Elliston, Associate Editor, in the Washington Post

The planetary power of the United States is the outstanding world fact in 1946. But our thought about it ought to be diluted. For as soon as the rest of the world has its own atom bombs, the United States will be the logical target for an aggressor and the target will be vulnerable.

Scientists give us a five-year run of supremacy. Thus the problem confronting the nation can be stated simply: Evolving a five-year plan of foreign policy which will insure world peace.

How? How get going with the building up of a world community? The obvious answer is to concert measures in common with the world in the United Nations for the transfer of power to a world authority. The trouble is that as yet neither of the two great power-holders of the world will abridge their own national sovereignty enough to permit such a transfer.

Foreign Policy in Tandem

These power-holders are the United States and, at a far distance behind, Russia. Both want peace. The first task of our diplomacy must therefore be the development of a Russo-American equilibrium in preparation for, and concurrently with, our greater task of establishing the world community. This is foreign policy in tandem.

It may be said that the rest of the world will object to a quest for a Russo-American equilibrium outside as well as inside the United Nations. I doubt it. At San Francisco I found that the nations were far more afraid of Russia and America falling out than of a Russo-American front.

A six-point outline of global American policy, directed primarily at the Russo-American impasse and finally at the achievement of a world community, is here presented as the Washington Post's base of discussion.

Manufacture of the atomic bomb should be stopped at once, and an announcement to that effect made. This would be the best assurance to Russia that our aim is to internationalize the atom bomb. Russia already has agreed to the procedure. It remains to speed procedure into program by a gesture of good faith.

Atom Bomb Is Mental Catalyst

Conduct a naval demonstration at once of the destructiveness of the atomic bomb. This has been promised by the Navy, but has not yet been done. The demonstration is the nation's due as it seeks to lay down a postwar military organization. (This has now been arranged to take place in the spring.—Editor's Note.)

It is the world's due, too. For the fact is that to some people, Hiroshima wasn't enough of a mental catalyst. It still left life in policies that were killed in the Japanese explosion. It froze minds, but it did not change enough of them.

Offer the British a plan for economic revival and colonial liquidation. At Moscow, the only area for which no procedure of pacification was prescribed was the Middle East. Here is the sore spot. And the United States is fast being reduced to a role of honest broker in the prevention of Russo-British difficulties, even incidents.

It is not enough to do a daily chore as a go-between. Nor will it suffice to give other Middle Eastern powers examples of good conduct—as, for instance, in our simple-minded withdrawal from Iran before due date. Negotiations are no substitute for positives.

Establish private international corporations in business and in banking. It is absolutely vital to encourage private internationalization as well as public. I mention the possibility of chartering private corporations by the United Nations. Why should there not be an international air transport company, international development banks (like, for example, the China consortium of pre-war years), an international corporation for the exploitation of uranium deposits, as well as an internationalized Ruhr?

A New Type of Corporation

Objections might be offered by the anti-cartelists. But private cartels are run for private interest. The new type of corporation I am thinking of would serve the public interest; they would promote a common interest across frontiers, and, moreover, safeguards against selfishness would be provided by regulation and oversight by the United Nations.

A loan to Russia. It is said that the refrain running throughout Stalin's talks with Roosevelt was that he could never be content until the Russians had gained a living standard comparable with the average European's. For that purpose he needed peace and help. The help could be given in the only real surplus we have got, namely, manufacturing equipment and know-how.

Such a loan to Russia would be of immense benefit to the United States. Russia is the greatest source of American needs in the entire world. What we need currently we could store or stockpile and, in addition, we could nurse some of our own resources.

News Freedom to Counter Fear

Freedom of information. Darkness has no place in the atomic age. Freedom of information is the only counter to fear, better than any system of inspection in atomic controls, and the leading promoter of representative institutions. At present we are seeking—as, e. g., in the Balkans—futilely to defend democracy where there is no smell of it in the grass-roots.

It is said that it will be impossible to get an exchange of free information out of Russia. The same Jeremiah said it was impossible to get an atomic pact out of Russia based upon the recognition of a place for the General Assembly of the United Nations in atomic control. They did not face Mr. Byrnes. Nor must they in this matter.

Our diplomacy must be unafraid when it is right. All we want is reciprocity. Reciprocity cannot be obtained by idle threats. But it can be brought to realization by a forceful diplomatic initiative conducted throughout the world.

Biography of George Sand Puts Emphasis on Romance

"The Life of the Heart: George Sand and Her Times," by Frances Winwar. (Harper & Brothers, New York.)

Miss Winwar's sparkling account of the life of the nineteenth century French novelist, George Sand, follows the pattern set by her earlier biographies. It exploits the exciting and especially the erotic passages in the career of the biographer is also a novelist by the vividness with which her characters and scenes are presented, and even more by the implausibly plot-like distinctness of episodes and interactions of characters in her narrative arrangement.

The roles of her persons are defined a little too neatly; they make their exits and their entrances with too much appropriateness of phrase and flourish.

The book shows an almost entire preoccupation with the romantic adventures of its subject and a comparative neglect of her literary accomplishment. If this emphasis were crudely and sensationally done it would be intolerable, but it is done with such refined ecstacy that a reader applauds the doing while he deplores the deed.

The only reason for writing anyone's biography is to explain his memorable achievement. George Sand's achievement cannot be explained without an extensive exploration of her affairs of the heart, for the ardent spirit which flames visibly in her novels was distilled from the actual emotional experiences of her life. But Miss Winwar does not satisfactorily establish the details of the process by which George Sand converted fleeting experience into lasting art.

The real principle of George Sand's literary development was the way in which her passionately sympathetic temperament embraced with increasing scope the problems of human relations, and illuminated them with light from her own experience.

Her earlier novels, tales of domestic tragedy and broken lives, showed her bruised idealism facing personal, but typical, problems of relationship between man and woman. Her later novels, until the quiet of age and retirement brought them a pastoral peace, showed her enlarging awareness of the broader problems of a complex human society.

How the idealism so frustrated in life was richly fulfilled in literary creation ought to be shown in an adequate biography. Miss Winwar has given us instead a half-book, elegant and witty, spicy and well-garnished, but finally disappointing.

A Collection of Franklin's Writings

"A Benjamin Franklin Reader," Edited by Nathan G. Goodman. (Thomas Y. Crowell Co., New York.)

The remarkable versatility of Ben Franklin can scarcely be better conveyed than by this 800-page collection of his writings. The selections include letters, essays, maxims, scientific papers, newspaper articles, official reports and, of course, the autobiography.

Franklin was interested in practically everything, and usually had something worth saying on any given subject. In this book, he is quoted on metaphysics, politics, science, agriculture, physics, medicine, journalism, mathematics and rules of daily conduct. In addition, there are light essays, whimsical and salty, and amusing letters, especially to the charming Mme. Brillouin. To produce his rounded portrait of Franklin, the compiler has chosen most discriminatingly from the great volume of writings the printer and statesman produced in his 84 years.

Grouse for Breakfast

"I WAS listening to Miss Lisa Sergio on the radio yesterday," said the grouse, unfolding his napkin, "and furthermore, I don't like grapefruit juice."

"Oranges," I said, "are expensive."

"So," said the grouse, "is Miss Sergio. Very expensive to British-American relations; the lady, who I understand, was a broadcaster for Mussolini, until something or other showed her the light, is still fighting the British, on the American air. She referred to the burning of the Japanese village of Belsen as a 'Lidice'."

"So," I protested, "did I in a column."

Bekasi Not Lidice.

"You," he said, "should be ashamed of yourself. You should apologize to your readers. You hear something, and if it is repeated often enough, you assume it is true. A curse of war—maybe the most lasting curse—is that it accustoms the mind to propaganda. But to come back to Lidice and Bekasi—

"They were both burned," I insisted stubbornly.

"So is this toast," he remarked. "But there are degrees of justice and degrees of crime even in arson. Lidice was burned by the Germans in reprisal for the assassination of one Heydrich, Gestapo chief in Prague, a torturer and persecutor of the people. No warning was given the inhabitants. The males above a certain age were shot; the women and children were dragged off to camp."

"Now, Bekasi, in Java, was a nest of rebels armed by and collaborating with the Japanese, who had committed a most horrible atrocity. They caught 20 British Gurkha soldiers and four R.A.F. crewmen and had them dismembered alive by the village butcher. The village was warned to evacuate its inhabitants, and it was then burned. No innocent human life was lost. There is, therefore, a difference in circumstances and behavior, and the fate of the village was different. You, nor Miss Sergio should call it a Lidice."

Tydings on Majority Rule.

The grouse picked up PM while I opened the New York Times. "I see," he said, "that the most outrageous statement ever made in Congress has been uttered by Senator Tydings."

"Impossible," I stated flatly. "How do you know?" he asked. "Do you know what Tydings said?"

"Not yet," I responded, "but I read the Congressional Record. It is impossible that Tydings should have made the most outrageous statement. Think of The Man Bill. Think of—"

"Senator Tydings said," read the grouse, "The rule of the majority"

Control of the Atomic Bomb

THE atomic bomb is once again on Page 1, and that is all to the good. There was a time when we seemed almost to have forgotten this terrible and wonderful instrument we created.

Now the Navy is to conduct a test on 35 warships and should go a long way toward answering the question of sea power in the future of warfare. If the test is set up on a fair basis and if the findings are not edited by old-line Admirals with an incurable passion for battleships, then we should know a great deal more than we do now about how to spend our security budget.

The question of whether any foreign representatives will be allowed to witness the test is under discussion. To bar them would seem a foolish restriction. Surely, it should be possible to safeguard all "secrets," and yet permit foreign experts to see for themselves what the new force can actually do. If there are any doubts about its power, then a first-hand look should convince the doubters.

Meanwhile, the Senate Atomic Energy Committee, under the chairmanship of Senator Brian McMahon, is holding hearings on McMahon's bill to put control of the atomic energy project under a commission made up of top-ranking civilians. It is a step long overdue.

So far, the Government has left the project entirely in the hands of the military men who directed its development. In short, atomic energy has been treated as merely another weapon of war.

A Shift in Opinion.

But it is obvious that a shift in opinion has occurred. At the time that the atomic bomb was first revealed to the world, the War Department sent a bill to Congress which, if it had been adopted, would have had the effect of concentrating all power in an administrator and that administrator would in all probability have been a military man. That was the May-Johnson bill, which was sidetracked by vigorous protests from the scientists who had helped to make the bomb.

When Secretary of Navy James Forrestal testified on the McMahon bill the other day, he took an entirely different tack. He recommended merely that the military be allowed to participate with civilians on the control commission. He argued that this was necessary to insure protection of

CRITICISM OF NEW CARDINAL VOICED IN RUSSIAN PRESS

MOSCOW, Jan. 28 (AP)—Discussing newly designated Cardinals, Izvestia said yesterday that Archbishop Francis J. Spellman of New York was waging active Vatican politics in America and trying "to arouse the American people to accept Franco."

"This new Cardinal by all means defended the Vatican when the Vatican, one year after the treacherous attack by Japan on Pearl Harbor and before many acts of criminal Japanese imperialism, favorably received the Japanese ambassador," said the article by D. Petrov.

The official government newspaper said the naming of four new Cardinals in the United States and one each in Canada, England and Australia was an effort to gain strength in Anglo-Saxon countries and accused Archbishop Bernard Griffin, English cardinal-designate, of making slanderous speeches against Soviet Russia.

BING CROSBY PUT UP

FOR SECOND 'OSCAR'

Nominated for Role in 'Bells of St. Mary's'—Ray Milland Believed Chief Rival.

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 28 (AP)—Bing Crosby's priestly role in "The Bells of St. Mary's" won him the nomination last night for 1945's "Oscar" from the Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences, and a chance to defend his triumph a year ago in "Going My Way."

Only Spencer Tracy—with "Captains Courageous" in 1937 and "Boys Town" in 1938—has been a male winner of two "Oscars."

On the feminine side, three former winners were given opportunity to duplicate the feat of repeaters Bette Davis and Luise Rainer. They were Ingrid Bergman, also for "Bells of St. Mary's"; Greer Garson for "The Valley of Decision"; and Jennifer Jones for "Love Letters."

Miss Bergman won with "Gaslight" last year, Miss Jones with "The Song of Bernadette" (1943) and Miss Garson with "Mrs. Miniver" (1942).

Crosby's chief competition is expected from Ray Milland, the alcoholic of "The Lost Weekend." Others nominated are Cornel Wilde, "A Song to Remember"; Gregory Peck, "Keys to the Kingdom"; and Gene Kelly, "Anchors Aweigh."

Completing the requisite five nominees for feminine starrings are Joan Crawford for "Mildred Pierce" and Gene Tierney for "Leave Her to Heaven."

"Bells of St. Mary's," "Anchors Aweigh," "Lost Weekend," "Mildred Pierce" and "Spellbound" were selected for the production competition. "Mildred Pierce" provides two of the contestants for top feminine supporting honors—Eve Arden and Ann Blythe—with Angela Lansbury nominated for "The Picture of Dorian Gray." Joan Loring for "The Corn Is Green" and Anne Revere for "National Velvet."

James Dunn, whose comeback in "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn" won him mention for the starring role, tops the list of male supporting nominees; also listed are Michael Chekhov, "Spellbound"; John Dall, "The Corn Is Green"; Robert Mitchell, "G.I. Joe"; and Carol Naisch, "A Medal for Benny."

Winners will be announced March 7.

WHITE HOUSE PLANS SHOWN TO CONGRESSIONAL LEADERS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—President Truman showed congressional leaders today an architect's sketch of the proposed $1,650,000 addition to White House executive offices which the House voted down last week.

Senate Democratic Leader Barkley of Kentucky later told reporters there was no detailed discussion of the plan. Truman told his last press conference the construction was a tempest in a teapot. He said it would not alter the appearance of the White House in so far as the public view was concerned.

Others in the group were Speaker Rayburn, Senator McClellan (Dem.), Tennessee, and Representative McCormack (Dem.), Massachusetts.

David L. Millar, St. Louis lawyer, was elected president of the Missouri State Bar at a meeting of the Board of Governors last Saturday in Jefferson City. He succeeded Walter R. Mayne, also of St. Louis.

Millar, former president of the St. Louis Bar Association, has practiced law for 25 years. He was mayor of University City from 1933 until 1937, and has served with numerous city and county civic organizations. He lives at 7298 Westmoreland drive, University City.

Truman Pulls Things Together

and George Allen is appointed to the RFC.

Although tinged with the flavor of petty personality, these are most serious matters, as anyone who studies the record of the President's labor policy can see.

From V-J day, when he hoped that industry and labor would settle their own differences, down to the White House meeting when he hoped Big Steel would accept his arbitration, every single hope of the President's for a solution was disappointed. The business of government cannot be done that way, and the result has been the extraordinary collapse of Truman's once high prestige.

It is now at rock bottom with politicians and observers of the political scene. But it need not stay there. Truman himself is an obviously good man, not stupid, with high sense of duty. If he and those around him tackle their task with unity and determination, as now seems possible, there is an off-chance they may surmount the enormous remaining obstacles in the road ahead.

WOMEN INDORSE M'ARTHUR COURSE IN RULING JAPAN

Urge U. S. Occupy Bases in Pacific, Funds to Fight Un-Americanism.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 28 (AP)—The twentieth annual Women's Patriotic Conference on National Defense yesterday endorsed Gen. Douglas MacArthur's administration over Japan and condemned "interference by any group or nation seeking to weaken his authority."

The conference did not specify those it regarded as interfering with MacArthur.

Representing 32 women's groups in the nation, the conference also recommended that the United States occupy all its "stepping stone" bases, conquered on the road to Tokyo, in the name of the United Nations.

The organization also recommended an increase in funds for the Congressional Committee on Un-American Activities to combat "tremendous expensive subversive groups."

The conference approved the American Legion plan for universal military training.

Other resolutions adopted recommended tightening of restrictions on immigration, opposed the merger of the symphony forces into a single department of defense and urged there has been further study and opposed federal aid to education in the states.

COUNTY ASKS U. S. FOR 2700 ACRES TO BE USED AS PARK

Formal application for a 2700-acre tract near Valley Park, formerly used by the War Department as a powder storage plant, was made today by the St. Louis County Court in a letter to St. Louis Property Administrator Stuart Symington.

Associate Judge Alvin Bartelsmeyer, who conferred with county officials in Washington last week, said he had been assured the county would be given the tract, provided it were used as a recreation area. It extends along the north side of Highway 66 west of Valley Park.

Judge Bartelsmeyer said an application to obtain facilities at the Weldon Spring TNT plant in St. Charles County for a tuberculosis hospital and home for aged persons was being prepared by the County Court. The court has asked County Counselor Erwin F. Vetter for an opinion on whether the county can legally acquire this property, since it lies outside the county limits.

KOSTELANETZ TO CONDUCT SYMPHONY CONCERT TONIGHT

Andre Kostelanetz will conduct the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra in a special concert in Kiel Auditorium Opera House tonight at 8:30 o'clock. It will be his second appearance of the season as guest conductor here.

The program will include "Romanian Fantasy," the conductor's own orchestral transcription of folk themes which he heard a group of Romanian musicians play at a soldiers' canteen in Cairo during his tour of overseas bases in 1944.

Other selections will be the Bach chorale, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," Beethoven's First Symphony, Rimsky-Korsakoff's "Capriccio Espagnol," "None But the Lonely Heart" and "Sleeping Beauty Waltz" by Tchaikovsky, Debussy's "Claire de Lune" and music from Jerome Kern's "Show Boat."

CARDINAL GLENNON AT OPENING OF CHAPEL AT CITY HOSPITAL

John Cardinal Glennon was present at the formal opening yesterday of the Chapel of the Divine Infant at City Hospital, 1515 Lafayette avenue. More than 300 persons attended.

Solemn pontifical mass was celebrated by the Most Rev. George J. Donnelly, Auxiliary Bishop of St. Louis with Cardinal Glennon at the throne. Music of the mass was by the Resurrectionist Fathers' seminary choir, under the direction of the Very Rev. John S. Mix, C.R.

Donations of St. Louis priests and parish members made possible the construction of the chapel, which seats 175 persons and will be dedicated by the Vincentian Fathers. The chaplain will be the Rev. Bernard Guibord, who has been at City Hospital since 1934.

WAINWRIGHT WARNS AGAINST U.S. APATHY

Says Attitude Precedes Disintegration of Armed Forces.

DETROIT, Jan. 28 (AP)—Gen. Jonathan M. Wainwright, who commanded the American forces at Bataan and Corregidor, warned today he is "beginning to see those symptoms of apathy and disinterest which have appeared at the end of every war we have fought."

"When those symptoms appear, disintegration of the armed forces invariably follows," the General told members of the Detroit Economic Club.

"From the beginning of the Republic, men rich in wisdom and experience have warned that military impotency breeds international disrespect, encourages aggression and finally sets the stage for another war," he said.

Gen. Wainwright made a plea for universal military training and said the only alternative would be maintenance of a large standing army which would be costly and repugnant to the American people.

After a four-year absence, during which time he lived in Mexico City, Mrs. Hubertus Schotten and her daughters, Miss Adeline and Miss Odile Schotten, will return to St. Louis this week. They will be with Mrs. Schotten's mother, Mrs. Marie Reine Fusz de Penaloza, 5266 Westminster place.

They made an extensive tour of Mexico and Central America and are now traveling through the West.

Mr. and Mrs. McLeod Stephens have bought a home at 18 Lindworth lane, off Litzinger road, and expect to take occupancy the middle of March. Meanwhile they are staying with Mr. Stephens' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Howard V. Stephens, 5165 Lindell boulevard.

Mr. Stephens was discharged from the Army last month. His wife is the former Miss Mary Caroline Morrison, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Morrison, 5296 Westminster place.

Miss Ruth Rodemeyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Monroe H. Rodemeyer, 5 Kentmore Park, will depart Wednesday for New York to spend two weeks. She will be the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Thomas Powers. Mrs. Powers is the former Miss Olive Gatch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Burnes Gatch, 47 Portland place.

Departing a few days ago for her home in Mexico City were Mrs. Peter H. B. Otway Smithers and her young son, Denny Lane, who had been visiting her mother, Mrs. Thomas M. Sayman, 5399 Lindell boulevard.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Arthur Bullock, 620 West Polo drive, Clayton, have as their guest for a few weeks, Mrs. Ruth Bradford Gage, of Abilene, Tex., a former St. Louisan. PROGRAM OF SONATAS FOR VIOLIN AND PIANO

Harry Farberman and Edith Schiller Present Second of Two Recitals.

By THOMAS B. SHERMAN

The second of two Sunday evening recitals devoted primarily to sonatas for violin and piano were given last night in the Tower Room of the Congress Hotel by Harry Farberman, concertmaster and assistant conductor of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Edith Schiller, pianist. Honest, discerning musicianship, an intimate atmosphere and a sympathetic audience made the occasion a thoroughly enjoyable one.

In the opening number, the Sonata in D Major by Schubert, the two artists had to deal with music that was in no way innocent and naive but music in which every note was exposed. Their performance had the virtue of simplicity achieved without apparent effort, which was no small accomplishment when one considers how much control is needed to seem unaffected. All three movements were clear, shapely and expressive even though Mr. Farberman's tone in the beginning was a little unsteady.

The Cesar Franck sonata was treated more expansively, as it should have been. Because of its larger sonorities and its more sensuous tunefulness it evoked a greater response. Moreover, it was played well and with conviction. For myself I should have been glad to hear the Schubert repeated.

In the second half of the program Mr. Farberman played as solos the Sonata in G Major by Beethoven, the Sonata in A Major by Paganini, Chopin's La Clochette. Both were extremely effective violinistically, and the Szymanowski music, with its rhapsodic feeling, had a satisfying emotional richness.

Miss Schiller was particularly happy in her solo performance of Ravel's Sonata, which was bright and graceful and with a sort of unforced charm. A Capriccio, Opus 76 No. 2, and two Intermezzi of Brahms. They were poetically well realized even though the rhythmic propulsion was not strong.

It is to be hoped that Miss Schiller and Mr. Farberman have been sufficiently encouraged to continue these sonata recitals. It is a neglected field so far as St. Louis is concerned.

Flyers Drub Cleveland, 7-4, to Take Over Third Place in Hockey Race

Pozzo and Gladu Star In Victory

By Harold Flachsbar

Bouncer Taylor's pepped-up Flyers were breathing the pure air of third place in the Western Division standings of the American Hockey League today, after holding down the cellar or being tied for last place ever since they joined the circuit in the fall of 1944.

There were 12,823 wild-eyed fans at The Arena last night, second largest crowd of the season, and they really got an eye full. The star-spangled Flyers drove home five goals in the first 12 minutes of one-sided action against the Cleveland Barons.

And the final result was a 7-4 victory for the St. Louis skaters, a triumph that elevated them into third place, with 40 points, ahead of the defending champion Barons, with 39 points. The Flyers, who gained only 14 victories in their first year in the A.H.L., now have 17, to go with six ties. The Barons, on the road for their last four contests, in which they gained only one tie against three setbacks, have 39 points from 16 victories and seven ties. The Flyers have 19 games to play, eight of them at home.

Play New Haven Next. Next action for the Flyers will be a match with the New Haven Eagles at The Arena Wednesday night. It is a regular league game, but will be a benefit for Eddie Brown, rookie defenseman, who lost an eye as the result of a playing accident at New Haven, Jan. 6. Seventy-five per cent of the receipts will be turned over to Brown.

New Haven will remain over for another contest here Saturday, and meanwhile Cleveland will be playing host to Hershey, tomorrow night and Providence, Saturday. Reporters walking into the Flyers dressing room a half hour before last night's game, heard Taylor say: "Bring 'em on; we're ready to go." The Flyers said it with goals, once the game got under way, a little later to the late seating of the near-capacity crowd.

Pugnacious Hec Pozzo and the flying Paul Gladu, both left wings, were the offensive big guns of the Flyers' bombardment. Pozzo tallied three goals to qualify for a new hat from the management, and Gladu caged two. The latter's was the first pair of the opening five in 12 minutes.

And if Paul didn't ice away the decision with two points in six minutes, Gladu did it in the second and a half minutes. Pozzo, who came out of Cleveland's reach with two more quickies, spaced only 33 seconds apart. Dick Kovach assisted in both of these, as Harvey Rimstad had helped on Gladu's points. The latter, who passed by Fred Hergert into the cage at 11:55, and the Flyers were five goals ahead.

The cheering fans, who hadn't vented their enthusiasm too much in earlier despite the fact that the St. Louis team's fine home record, proverbially shook the rafters. This was something that hadn't happened in many moons (if ever)—the home team leading by five goals so early in the play. The five came in the period. Fred Thurier scored for Cleveland before the first stanza siren, and after Pozzo made it 6-1 at 1:26 in the second canto, Tom Burlington and Lou Trudel beat Hec Highton to get the Flyers in the opening minute of the final period made it 6-4, and it appeared that the Flyers might be blowing their big lead. But the St. Louis defense was tight enough, and midway in the period Roy Sawyer stole a loose disc in the Flyers' defensive zone, skated a fast solo to the length of the rink and lifted a shot over Harvey Teno's shoulders, making the final score 7-4.

Incidentally, was playing his second game in the nets for the Barons after a long layoff due to Johnny Kiszkan's good sport as spare goalie.

Two Flyers Chased. Tempers flared off and on during the struggle, especially in the third period, when there were several fights and near fights that failed to result in penalties. Pozzo, whose dander is apparently easily aroused by certain rivals, was consistently involved. He squared off with Earl Bartholome, Bus Brayshaw and Trudel in the third period (with no penalties assessed). Gladu and Pete Beasone were finally chased for a little slashing duel.

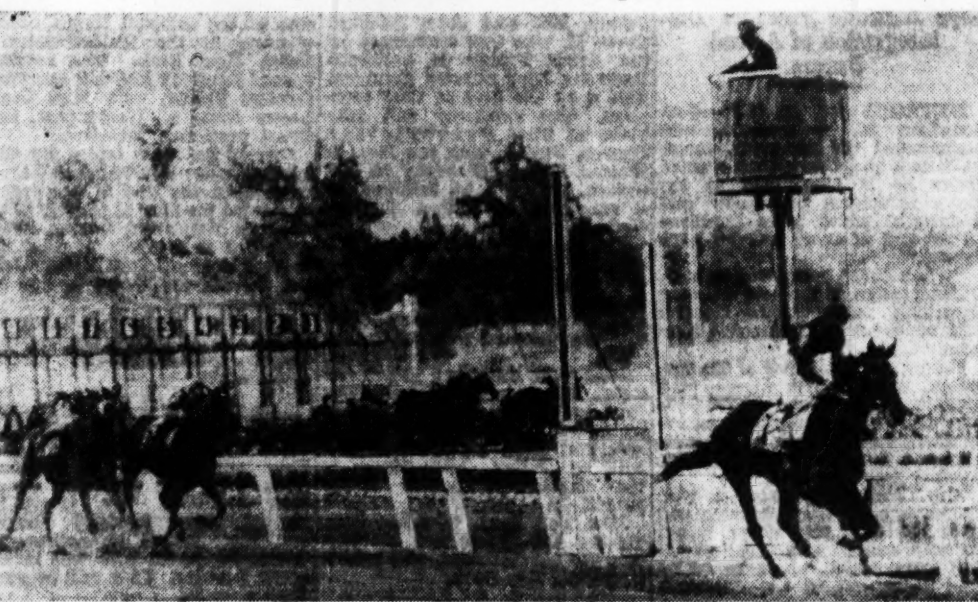

The 12,823 crowd brought the Flyers' total for the season in 23 games to 179,395. With the Boston benefit game coming up Wednesday and another weekend match Saturday, the St. Louis club may pass the 300,000 mark by the end of the week.

A trade that was to have been announced tomorrow leaked out somehow after the game. The Flyers are to obtain Fred Robertson, a veteran defenseman, from Hershey in exchange for Forward Oscar Aubuchon, who hasn't been dressed for Flyers games the past two weeks.

All passes have been suspended for Wednesday's contest, at the suggestion of the working press and radio. Even ushers and telephone operators will pay their way into the arena.

Bowls Perfect Game. CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP)—Herman Gorenson of Chicago bowled 20 strikes in a row, including a perfect game of 300, as he turned in a three-game series of 803 here yesterday. Gorenson was practicing with other members on the team on which he bowls in the Northwest Traveling League here when he turned in the scores of 234, 300 and 269.

Flyer, Stewart Headline Wallach's Card Tonight

Lou Flyer, who made something of an impression on boxing fans when he defeated Dave Riley in eight rounds at Palace Gardens last Monday night, will get a chance to further his reputation when he meets Jimmy Stewart, Philadelphia, in the eight-round feature at the 3924 Finney avenue arena tonight.

Flyer wasn't too much of a ball of fire in defeating Dave Riley, brother of Charlie Riley, who opposes Phil Terranova at the Auditorium, Feb. 22, but he was colorful enough and aggressive enough to deserve another look by local fans.

The match is the headline of a five-bout card, on which Art Cooper, St. Louis Negro, opposes George Harrison, Huntington, W. Va., in the semifinals, while Jimmy Fields, Chicago, meets Hank Postaway, Scott Field, in another six-round.

Postaway defeated Fields in a recent match when the former middleweight Golden Gloves champion, had just been discharged from the Army Air Force and was far over weight. Fields since has trained down by 20 pounds and hopes that will help him get revenge against Postaway.

In two four-round preliminaries, Charles Stacker, East St. Louis, opposes Ignatius Page, St. Louis, while Henry Chucholik, St. Louis, meets Thomas Brown, Quincy, Ill.

A ruling of city officials has limited the attendance to 1000 persons.

Jesse Jackson, 154, of Los Angeles (Marianas), connected with a right cross to the jaw of Johnnie Spoon, 154, New York City (Philippines), which ended the fight in a minute and 40 seconds. It was Jackson's second knockout of the tournament.

Hogan, Keiser In Playoff for Phoenix Title

PHOENIX, Ariz., Jan. 28 (AP)—The pressure was heavy on belting Ben Hogan yesterday when he missed that four-foot putt on the eighth green that sent the Phoenix Open golf tournament into overtime. It will be heavy today when he meets Herman Keiser from Akron, O., in an 18-hole playoff.

The 33-year-old professional shotmaker from Hershey, Pa., needed that putt to beat a 273-stroke, 72-hole total turned in by Keiser and to capture the $1500 first money and the Phoenix Open title. It will be the first playoff of the pro's current tour.

In the morning, the 137-pound ex-Army officer matched shots with George Schneller of Salt Lake City, Utah, one back of Hogan when they started. Schneller posted rounds of 72 and 73 yesterday to wind up fifth with 280 and 378.

In the afternoon, he watched a red-hot Vic Ghezzi, former Army sergeant from Knoxville, Tenn., take the course apart in 30-34-64—tying his own course record here—to sweep from nowhere into third place in the final standing and earn $750.

The loser of today's playoff, the second in Phoenix Open history, gets $1000 second money.

Fourth place went to E. J. Harrison of Little Rock, Ark., who made the two rounds in 71-67 for 278 and $600.

Top amateur contestant was Smiley Quick of Los Angeles with a 69 and 73 for 283, one stroke better than Frank Stranahan of Toledo, O., whose rounds were 67 and 72. Bud Ward of Spokane, Wash., finished third with 291.

Sam Byrd of Detroit and Lloyd Mangrum of Los Angeles were bracketed ahead of Schneller with 279s and Joe Zarahard, Norristown, Pa.; Leland Gibson, Kansas City, Mo.; Chandler Harper, Portsmouth, Va., and Jim Hines, Chicago, all had 281.

Harold (Jug) Spaden of San Francisco, who finished well back in the running with a 285, defeated Byron Nelson, Toledo (O.) golfing ace, in the only other deadlock in the history of the tournament. McSpaden won that one, 18-14, 70-72. Nelson, the winner of the tournament last year, was not entered this year.

East St. Louis Kegler In Fifth Place in Dom Devito Classic

CHICAGO, Jan. 28 (AP)—The early birds in the Petersen and Dom Devito bowling classics still were tops today, and one 1945 champion definitely was out of the running.

When the firing ceased in the two rich tournaments early today, Frank Soprosato of Cleveland, O., still led the $52,000 Petersen classic with 1627 and Joseph Beran of Chicago continued to top the $22,000 Devito meet with 1543.

Meanwhile, Milton Lake of Pleasantville, N. J., who won the $2500 first prize in the Devito tournament last year, finished this morning with 1591 for his eight games, good only for third place in the early standings.

Emil Siperke of Cleveland was second behind Beran with 1594. George Pfeiffer of Cedar Rapids, Ia., was fourth with 1552 and Wes Weising of East St. Louis, Ill., was fifth with 1545.

Charles Lausche of Euclid, O., jumped into second in the Petersen meet with a score of 1593, replacing Stan Wojcik of Minneapolis for the runnerup spot.

Wojcik bowled 1587 Saturday. Wojcik came Charles Wilkinson, Minn., Ind., 1563; John Schira, Cincinnati, O., 1556; and Hugh Young, Minneapolis, and Louis B. Kosansky, Eldorado, Kan., 1552 each.

Louis, on Visit Here, Says He Is About 15 Pounds Over Best Weight

Champion to Start Serious Work March 1—Conn, Passing Through, Says He'll Be More Careful in June 19 Title Fight.

By W. J. McGoogan

Like ships that pass in the night, the two principals in the world heavyweight championship bout scheduled to be held in Yankee Stadium, New York, June 19, were in St. Louis yesterday. That is, Joe Louis, the champion, was here with a dance band, while Billy Conn, the challenger, spent the day with friends before returning to Hot Springs, Ark., where he is doing preliminary training.

Louis hasn't started work for the bout, but has only three more engagements with the band after which he plans to go to French Lick, Ind., to get in some pre-training work.

Joe says he is about 15 pounds overweight, which means that he weighs around 220 pounds, while Conn looks fit at the moment but says he weighs about 190 pounds and plans to start training in Greenwood Lake, N. J., about March 1, weighing about 182 pounds.

Conn was returning from a trip to his home in Pittsburgh, where he encountered Louis and both discussed their income tax problems and came to the conclusion that they will have to pay a sizeable share of their parts of an estimated $3,000,000 "gate" to Uncle Sam.

They'll Be All Even Here. Both have been in the armed service for approximately the last three years and neither has any serious fighting in that time, but neither plans any bouts until they meet each other in the plant that Babe Ruth built.

"It'll all be even," said Louis, discussing that angle of the bout. "I'm not going to fight anybody until I meet Conn and Billy won't, either."

Louis reflected on the fact that it has been 12 years since he came into St. Louis a comparative unknown in the fight game to struggle for the National A.A.U. lightweight championship.

And that was a title he won the hard way for Joe had broken a bone in his left hand in a tournament in Detroit and while he developed a series of boils under his right arm.

With all of that, however, he went on to win the 15-pound title. He defeated Joe Bauer of Cleveland, in his first match, won on default from Hugh Rogers, Jacksonville, Fla., in the second. He knocked out Arlo Soldati, Chicago, in the first round, then defeated Bud Schildknecht, Kansas City, for the championship.

In the latter fight, protecting his injured left hand, which had been taped before he entered the ring, Louis coasted to a triumph and brought down the boos of the crowd on his head. The fans were anxious for a knockout and didn't know how seriously Joe had been injured.

Got Real Start Here. As a matter of fact, his trainer sat up with him each night of the tournament applying hot poultices to the injured left hand to keep him going.

"I really was the start of his rise to fame. Critics at the ring-side predicted a fine future for the Detroit Bomber and for once the wise guys were right. He looked the part of a professional fighter then and predictions were made that he would be the next heavyweight champion of the world. Joe went on to make those predictions come true in an amazing ring history as the world has ever seen.

He scored with triumph after triumph, including victories over Primo Carnera, Max Baer, Jack Sharkey, Paulino Uzuodon and everybody else who was around until he met and knocked out Jim Braddock for the championship in Chicago.

In a previous meeting with Conn some four years ago, Louis was losing on points for 12 rounds, but managed to reach Billy with a knockout punch in the thirteenth. "I won't make the same mistake again," said Billy as he prepared to board a midnight train for Hot Springs. "I tried to slug it out with Joe that night but this time I'll be more careful."

Looks in Good Condition. The handsome Pittsburgh youth, 27 years of age, five years younger than Louis, shows the effects of his recent work in the Arkansas resort. He appears to be in fine physical condition following a program he has set for himself including sessions on the road in the morning, workouts in the gymnasium and plenty of golf.

He spent the day with his friends, Joe St. John, Jimmy McAteer and Fay Morrissey, and in the evening visited an undertaker parking on the north side where Morrissey pulled his car into a parking place only to have an irate neighbor dash out and threaten physical harm to the party unless they left.

Plump, but Not Fat

JOE LOUIS, who will defend his world title next June 19 in New York against Bill Conn, is 15 pounds overweight, at 220. In St. Louis yesterday he looked plump, not fat. He will start reducing at French Lick Springs early in March.

"Gee, I'm glad he didn't know it was me," remarked Conn, "or he'd probably be suing me today." But consider what a fat chance the poor guy would have had if he had tackled Conn and his pals.

Billy was surrounded by fans in the midway of the Union Station demanding his autograph and he did the best he could for them.

"Will I? Sure I will," Billy came back just before he moved off to get on the train.

Louis, after visiting friends in the city which really put him on the first rung of the ladder to fame, was scheduled to depart for Indianapolis.

He laughed when asked about Mike Jacobs' statement in New York recently that Joe spends so much money.

"Oh, I don't know," he said, "I only spend what I have to in order to live. You gotta take care of your family."

Watkins Cue Victor; Five Tied for Lead

Ray Watkins of East St. Louis, east side champion, defeated Gene Hacker, 30-27, in their match in the Ozark three-cushion tournament match at the Pla-Mor. Watkins had a high run of three to one for Hacker.

Five players are now tied for first place. They are Dan Neely, Bob Reiss, Louis Parnas, Al Fedor and Watkins.

No. 5 for Zenthoefers. The Fioerkes defeated the DeAndres Girls, 25 to 23, and the Zenthoefers swamped the St. Louis Park five, 43 to 14, in yesterday's games in the Mount City City Bowling League at the Battery A.

In the first game, Mary Albrecht sank a field goal with 40 seconds to play to decide the contest. The Zenthoefers, paced by Mary Wood, had little trouble gaining their fifth consecutive victory in league play.

Concordia Seeks to Stop Bears

Preachers' Problem Is London

By Bob Broeg

Bushy-haired Warren Schuermann, Concordia Seminary's youthful basketball coach, rode the fence of indecision today, trying to make up his mind on an assignment important to the Preachers.

Concordia will play Washington University tonight at the Bears' Field House, beginning at 8:30 after a 7 o'clock preliminary between the two schools' "B" teams. And Schuermann, publicly at least, had not yet decided to whom he would trust the job of guarding swarthy Stan London, the scoring star of the Red and Grey.

Indications were that the tough task would fall either to Calvin (Gus) Fiege, a slender junior from South Bend, Ind., or Donald (Dutch) Koenig, the Fort Wayne freshman and Concordia's own No. 1 goal-getter. But Schuermann wouldn't say for sure. Maybe he knew; perhaps he felt wise a last-minute choice.

Only One Ever Did It. One thing certain, an enei-meeny-miney-moe selection wouldn't do, for the clever London, who makes his own scoring opportunities with a deceptive dribble and fast footwork, has scored 210 points for a 16.3 average. Only one opposing player, an agile big man from Iowa Pre-Flight, checked London. Howie Dallmar, former Pennsylvania captain and second team All-American, held the Washington wizard to four points.

The only alternative from shacking London and his mates, who have averaged 49.2 points while winning seven of 14 games, the last three consecutively, is to race the Bears from basket to basket in a scoring jammer. Concordia, on one of its sharper nights, could do that, all right, for the Preachers have averaged 49 points while winning six of nine games. Moreover, the Seminary athletes like the fast-breaking offensive style.

Concordia's Koenig, a bespectacled player, has scored 111 points, at the rate of 12.3 a game, for a team featured by ministry students from outside the St. Louis area. In the starting lineup, aside from Indians Koenig and Fiege, Harry (Snuffy) Smith resides in Covington, Ky., Orval Oswald in Milwaukee and Paul (Herky) Hinrichs in Millard, Ia.

Return Game Scheduled. Past Washington-Concordia games have been close, given the fact that the Bears are splitting even with the teams series each of the last two seasons. On paper, tonight's game, which will be followed by a return contest Feb. 18, would seem to follow the same pattern. Against their only common opponent, Arkansas State, the Bears won, 53 to 39, and the Preachers gained two victories over the same team, 56 to 46 and 49 to 44. The probable starting lineups, with individual points preceding a name and heights in parentheses:

Pls. Ht. Pts. Pls. Ht.
WASHINGTON: 210 London 5'11", 111 Koenig 6' 4", 101 Berger 5'11", 61 Hinrichs 6' 4", 93 Smith 6' 3", 70 Smith 6' 4", 63 Miller 5'10", 68 Oswald 5'10", 32 Sauer 5'10", 37 Fiege 5'11".

Sauer Named Kansas Coach

LAWRENCE, Kan., Jan. 28 (AP)—The appointment of George Sauer, former Nebraska All-American fullback and later grid coach at the University of New Hampshire, as head football coach at the University of Kansas was announced today by Athletic Director E. C. Quigley.

Washington U. Gets Inquiry on Football Coaching Position

One inquiry from a prospective candidate for the football coaching position left open by the departure of Tom Gorman has been received by Washington University, Dean Douglas V. Martin Jr. said today.

Gorman, who coached the Bears in 1942 before going in the Navy, last week rejected a Washington offer of a one-year contract to coach football there. Nothing new has developed in the university's search for a satisfactory basis for football, Dean Martin said. Chancellor Arthur H. Compton has been in Washington, D. C.

WRAY'S COLUMN

'Happy Birthday' Is N.L. Theme Song

"HAPPY Birthday to You" will be theme song of the baseball magnates when they assemble at New York next Saturday to observe the seventy-first birthday anniversary of the National League. . . . It will be one of the happiest birthdays in the long history of the organization, which made its bow Feb. 2, 1876.

This country has just fought a four-year war of almost unbelievable magnitude and cost. . . . Yet its close finds the National League—and the American League as well—soaring high up in the financial stratosphere. . . . Not one team in the National and American Leagues finds itself in the distress so common among second division teams of other years. . . . Every team has resources with which to help improve its playing strength. . . . And the Horn of Plenty is filled to overflowing, as to playing material.

And this is the more strange when we consider the dire forebodings, voiced from the start of the war, as to the ability of the major leagues to carry on. . . . Year after year predictions that all baseball plants would shut down before the season's end, were made.

But instead the show went on and in 1945 officials reported an almost unbelievably prosperous campaign. . . . And this, notwithstanding the major leagues lost about 550 players to Uncle Sam's armed services.

Frick Looks for A Close Race

PRESIDENT FRICK'S worries have been reduced to a minimum. . . . Even the Phillies have money. . . . Clubs usually sunk in a financial abyss no longer have to be assisted. . . . Of the N.L. outlook he is quoted by the Associated Press in part as saying: "There isn't a club that isn't financially well fixed. . . . The Cards are getting ready to build a new park. . . . Several of our clubs and their teams set up a wonderful record. . . . She writes that her girls are doing very well in competition with men, so far. . . . A game at Pacific, Mo., against the men's five there, is next on the Olympic Co-eds' schedule.

Fourth Record For Miss Pence

Carol Pence and Jane Griesedieck each held new records today in the Ozark A.A.U. Women's All-round swimming meet following the second competition at the Y.M.H.A. pool.

Miss Pence, who has established four marks in the meet, took the 60-yard free style in 37.5, lowering the time of 38 set by Bernadine Kessler in 1943. Miss Griesedieck won the 100-yard free style in 1:08. The former mark was 1:09.1, also set in 1943. The girls took turns in defeating each other in the two senior events.

JUVENILE DIVISION.
60-YARD INDIVIDUAL MEDLEY—Won by Margaret Adams, Edna Becker, Beverly Cohen, third; Mary Belle Kercher, fourth. Time—1:21.

SENIOR DIVISION.
60-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Carol Pence, Jane Griesedieck, second; Alfreda Kiel, third. Time—37.5. (New record; old record—38, set by Bernadine Kessler in 1943.)
100-YARD FREE STYLE—Won by Jane Griesedieck, Carol Pence, second; Alfreda Kiel, third. Time—1:08. (New record; old record—1:09.1, set by Jean Kemper in 1943.)

Three Records Set In Bobsled Tourney

LAKE PLACID, N. Y., Jan. 28 (AP)—James Bickford, racing for the Saranac Lake bobsled club, successfully defended his Adirondack Association A.A.U. senior two and four man bobsled titles in weekend competition, breaking three Olympic run course records. Bickford guided his four-man crew to victory yesterday, chalking up a half-mile record for a single heat of 37.08 seconds and for four heats of 2:29.07. Bickford broke his own single heat record of 37.79 and the four-man mark of John Dewey, 2:35.01, both set in 1942.

Riggs Defeats Perry In Pro Tennis Final

PASADENA, Jan. 28 (AP)—The nine years that Fred Perry spotted Bobby Riggs were too much for him, and Riggs walked off with the title and most of the cash in the $2000 Huntington Professional Tennis Tournament Sunday.

many years. . . . Several clubs have added new and high-grade players to their rosters. . . . I look for the whole race to tighten up.

The joint major-league meetings will be held on the same date; object, to agree on schedules. . . . This should be simplified by the war's end. . . . And a notable feature probably will be the approval of a much-reduced night baseball setup.

However, St. Louis and Washington will again go in for heavy floodlight schedules. . . . This will distress almost everybody—players, writers and employees—except the club owners and perhaps the fans. . . . There seems no doubt that in this area, spectators will night games and turn out three for one as compared to midweek day games. . . . Visiting clubs will love that, of course.

Helen Stephens In A New Activity

THE "fastest woman" in athletic annals, Olympic sprint champion Helen Stephens has a new job. . . . She is acting as recreational director for a Washington avenue business firm, Dorcas Dresses Inc., which also operates out-of-state plants. . . . As a side line Helen is managing the "Helen Stephens Olympic Co-eds," a girls' basketball team that specializes in games against men's teams. . . . Helen captained the Curtis-Wright basketball five and her team set up a wonderful record. . . . She writes that her girls are doing very well in competition with men, so far. . . . A game at Pacific, Mo., against the men's five there, is next on the Olympic Co-eds' schedule.

Reiser, former member of the Brooklyn Dodgers who had a .421 batting average in the 1943 national semi-pro tournament at Wichita was selected as the leading hitter; Besse, of the Philadelphia Athletics, the outstanding pitcher, and Travis, erstwhile star with the Washington American League entry, the top infielder. Besse won four straight games and saved a fifth for Sherman Field in the 1944 tournament, and Travis played errorless ball in 16 games in the 1942, 1943 and 1944 semi-pro competition.

CATHOLICS BACK LEFTIST SWING IN CZECHOSLOVAKIA

daily wrote, "must regulate private enterprise not only in subordinating it to the social interest of the nation, but also to its own plans of production and distribution. Such phenomena as temporary booms in production and economic crisis can either be completely avoided or dealt with by state-appointed experts, by the release of credits, or by other economic measures."

The same Catholic writer maintains further that state control neither paralyzes nor thwarts personal initiative. "Although it is still possible to find the old-fashioned type of private owner who is out for personal profit, we already observe the emergence of some who have grasped the meaning of the new trends and who are building and creating for the sheer love of the work and for the general scheme of things."

Grateful to Russia. Equally striking is the attitude of the Czech Catholics toward Russia. In the course of my travels in Moravia, I stopped for a night with the Catholic priest of the village of Jassana. As I walked into his study, I saw on the bookshelves photographs of Monseigneur Shramek, leader of the Czech Catholics of Edward Benes, President of Czechoslovakia, and of Stalin. I asked my host why he was honoring the foremost Marxist leader in the world. Terse and full of meaning was his reply.

"I am a Slav," he said, "and Stalin is the commoner-in-chief of the most powerful Slav army in history. This army saved us from annihilation and will protect us in the future from German attacks and German efforts to exterminate us."

"Obzory," Prague's foremost Catholic weekly, in its issue of Nov. 7, featured on the cover a reproduction of a painting of Lenin and the hammer and sickle banner. The inside of the cover was richly illustrated with photographs of Stalin and posters and proclamation of the 1917 revolution.

There was another official Catholic recognition of the Soviet revolution on the same day in St. James's, one of the oldest and most magnificent churches in Prague. Dr. Josef Fiala, a monk of the Minorite Order and one of the officiating priests, invited foreign correspondents to attend the special mass he was holding in honor of the Russian revolution.

"Questions of National Survival." In speaking of the nationalization decree, he said: "To us Catholics it is not a question of conflict between capital and labor but one of national survival." This is precisely what Social Democrats and Communists are saying.

In speaking of his friendliness to Russia, he said, "Think what the Germans did to our church. They closed our theological seminary and converted it into a Gestapo office. Monseigneur Beran, rector of the seminary, they flung into a concentration camp. The theological students they deported for forced labor to Germany."

I asked him later if he had received permission from the archbishop to accord official recognition to the 1917 revolution. "Our Prague archbishop," he said, "is dead. But I did receive written permission from the office of the archbishop."

Since Dr. Fiala is recognized as one of the rising Catholic leaders of the country, I interviewed him at some length. The son of a blacksmith from the town of Spiska Novacs, in Slovakia, he is only 31 years old. He studied philosophy and theology in Rome and has been in Prague since 1935.

Free to Pursue Faith. Because he was anti-Fascist and helped Jews get out of the country by converting them and making it possible for them to get visas to South America, he had to flee from Prague. He sought refuge in Slovakia. There he organized a Catholic council to fight Fascism, German and Slovakian. He became a partisan and fought with the Red Army. "Let the world say all it chooses about the Russians," he said "All I know is they haven't interfered with the opening of our church institutions. Our schools, our colleges, our press are functioning again. We are as free to pursue our faith as we were in the pre-Munich days."

He, too, had a photograph of Stalin on a bookcase in his cell. "A Red officer gave it to me," he said, "and I have framed it." The Czech Catholics are among the most Slav-conscious members of the Slav race. Ardently patriotic, adherents to the highly liberal intellectual traditions for which the Czechs have been noted, they are among the foremost champions of the movement for reconciliation between the eastern and western churches. The present battle between Moscow and the Vatican does not discourage them in the pursuit of this reconciliation.

"The Communists have their Marx and we Catholics have the encyclical of Pope Leo XIII," is the language an eminent Catholic layman used in explaining to me the leftist ideology of the Czech Catholics.

United States toward Germany will prove one of the most important tests of this country's relations with Russia. Any United States plan with respect to Germany must be clarified, for which four measures are urgently needed. First, President Truman should state that the United States will participate in Allied control of Germany so long as it may prove to be necessary.

"Second, a special Office for the Administration of German Occupation Affairs should be created in Washington, to expedite decisions frequently held up in the past because of the pressure of other business, both foreign and domestic.

disregarded by Russia. In the first place, Britain is the only country in Europe which is big enough and solid enough to attract the loyalty of the smaller countries which are not in the Russian orbit—in other words, the British have real friends.

Behind Britain always stands the United States, whose people are generally Anglophobe, but whose interests decree that no single power shall dominate the rest of the world. These interests also dictate that the Suez Canal shall be in friendly hands and that the oil fields of the Near East shall not be threatened by a power which, in certain circumstances, might become hostile.

Britain's present picture is gloomy, yet this country retains a certain inherent power in the world which cannot be, and is not,

—WALTER J. BLACK, PRESIDENT OF THE CLASSICS CLUB INVITES YOU TO ACCEPT FREE

NOTHING short of amazing is the way this great classic—written more than two thousand years ago—hits so many nails squarely on the head today! Here, in the clearest reasoning in all literature, is the pure essence of how to get the best out of life. How to look at love and learning and friendship. How to live a free and intelligently happy life with what we have, whether we possess worldly wealth or only the riches that lie hidden in our hearts and minds.

This beautiful Classics Club Edition of PLATO is the famous Jowett translation, brilliantly edited and annotated by Louise Ropes Loomis, Professor Emeritus of Wells College. It contains the five great dialogues: Apology, Crito, Phaedo, Symposium and the Republic. In these dramatic conversations between friends—fresh, spontaneous, humorous, informal—you have “philosophy brought down from heaven to earth.” This book, on which most of man’s thinking has been founded, will be a corner-stone of your library. And you may now have it free, as a membership gift!

This Beautifully Bound Superbly Decorated Edition of

DIALOGUES

Why The Classics Club Offers You This Book Free

WILL you add this lovely volume to your home library now—as a membership gift from The CLASSICS CLUB? You are invited to join today...and to receive on approval beautifully bound editions of the world’s greatest masterpieces, which were chosen by four distinguished judges.

Suppose an expert on the world’s greatest reading were to visit your home. No matter how much or how little education you have had, you would listen enthralled as your famous guest spoke glowingly of the greatest books of all time, what warm friends you can make of them, and how they can help anyone attain a fuller, richer life.

At the request of The Classics Club, four authorities formed themselves into a Selection Committee to choose the masterpieces which offer the greatest enjoyment and value to the “pressed for time” men and women of today. They agreed that every book selected must receive the unanimous vote of all four members of the Committee. And The Classics Club now presents these great books to you.

Why Are Great Books Called “Classics”?

A true “classic” is a living book that will never grow old. For sheer fascination it can rival the most thrilling modern novel. In its vitality of inspiration it can arouse a new freshness of viewpoint and a new breadth of understanding, so necessary in times of great historical significance like these.

Perhaps you have often wondered how these truly great books “got that way.” First, because they are so readable. They would not have lived unless they were read; and they would not have been read unless they were interesting. And of course, to be interesting they had to be easy to understand. And those are the very qualities which characterize these selections: readability, interest, simplicity.

It is not necessary to have a “higher education” to appreciate these books; and, after you read and know them, you will have acquired a broader and more liberal education than most of your business and personal acquaintances. You will have lost any personal concern about an “inferiority complex” and any fear about not being the equal of others whose formal education is greater than your own.

Only Book Club of Its Kind

The Classics Club is different from all other book clubs in these three ways: 1. Its sole purpose is to distribute to its own members the world’s great classics at a low price. 2. Its members are not obligated to take any specific number of books. 3. Its volumes are luxurious De Luxe Editions—beautifully bound in fine buckram, the same material ordinarily found in $5.00 and $10.00 bindings. They are richly stamped in genuine gold, which will retain its original lustre, and have tinted page tops—books which you and your children will read and cherish for many years.

A Trial Membership Invitation to You

You are invited to accept a Trial Membership in The Classics Club. With your first book will be sent an advance notice about future selections. You may reject any book you do not wish.

As a Trial Member, you need not take any specific number of books—only the ones you want. No money need be paid in advance, no membership fees. You may cancel membership at any time.

Paper, printing, binding costs are rising. Therefore, in order to assure yourself the present low price—as well as to receive your free copy of PLATO—we suggest that you mail this Invitation Form to us at once. THE CLASSICS CLUB, One Park Avenue, New York 16, N. Y.

That Crosby Rumor Is Still Around

By Harold Heffernan

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 26. BING CROSBY has finally usurped George Raft's spot as the most "killed" actor in Hollywood. Up to a few years ago, the industry was periodically swept by rumors of Raft's demise and studio publicists were called out of midnight beds to check for the wire services.

Now that Bing has reached the very top of the box-office ladder and because he sneaks off on unannounced vacations—such as his recent funfest in New York—the tall tale mongers go to work on him. During the last month, for instance, Paramount and RKO studios and all the press associations have been besieged with Crosby death, accident and illness rumors.

One had him sequestered in the Mayo Clinic at Rochester, Minn., another at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, and another at Barnes Hospital, St. Louis. All the time Bing was in the East having fun with pals at a few choice spots.

Bing's "death" and "disappearance" certainly cannot be attributed to sorrow over a flop movie—not if you give half a glance to box-office records being smashed by his current "The Bells of St. Mary's."

Now running in 67 theaters, "Bells" is far ahead of the gross business transacted by "Going My Way."

According to the treasurer of Rainbow Productions—the company headed by Bing and Leo McCarey—the film is headed toward a total gross of $10,000,000. If true, this would spot it in third place among all-time money-making pictures.

MANY CRITICS wonder why "Bells" is doing so much more business than "Going My Way," even though it has Ingrid Bergman's name to help head the marquee billing. The answer is that "Going My Way" went out to theaters with virtually no advance ad campaign. It was a sleeper, tagged by Paramount as just another Crosby program picture. Nevertheless, it will gross in the neighborhood of $8,000,000 before it runs out.

What about another Father O'Malley role for Crosby? Undoubtedly a third in the religious series would reap similar heavy rewards, but Leo McCarey says no—and with emphasis. He thinks two are enough and, rather than run the idea into the ground, he's content to try something else.

Fact is McCarey is right now at Palm Springs collaborating with St. Clair McKelway on his next production for Rainbow. It is a comedy titled "The Best of Everything," and McCarey says there won't be a nun or a priest in the whole set-up.

NEWS IN NIBBLES: Studios and exhibitors are howling their heads off over the invasion of their producing and exhibiting fields by those naughty 16-mm. film promoters. They call it "unfair competition." That's what they said about radio 20 years ago; several big chain theater owners actually attempting to have the ether waves outlawed.

Dennis Morgan won the fastest fight in history with the Warner Bros. Any star who dares defy the brothers is usually out of luck in pictures for a long, long time. Bette Davis and Ann Sheridan learned this. However, Morgan announced one morning last week he considered his contract "terminated," and by nightfall the Warners had agreed to pay him the bonuses demanded.

IS SANTA ANITA giving the gate to the movie stars? Anyway, its always exclusive Turf Club has gone extra ultra this year. To prevent members from slipping their passes to others, each is treated to a colorful paper bracelet which can't be removed without drawing the questions of guards. For the first time since this fancy race course opened, George Raft's name is missing from the list of Turf Club members. They say George was barred because he's a gambler!

Strong indication that Clifton Webb will carry off "best supporting actor" honors in the forthcoming Academy poll is offered by the verdict of critics participating in the Film Daily's poll. Webb, for his work in "Laura," scored a two-to-one victory over J. Carroll Naish, whose vivid impersonation of Charley in "A Medal for Benny" was considered to have made him a cinch for an Oscar.

Seeing the Joneses

By Christopher Billopp

ON the rare occasions when you see the Joneses it seems a shame you do not see more of them. And when you express yourself to that effect, it turns out the Joneses feel the same way about you.

You and the Joneses agree that the situation must be remedied. You picture yourself inviting the Joneses to a meal, and the Joneses picture themselves doing the same to you.

You can see yourself dropping in on Jane and her husband or having them drop in on you and spending a delightful evening together. Or there will be times when you will meet downtown at a restaurant for dinner and a movie afterwards.

Or perhaps both you and the Joneses like to walk. In that case why not meet on some fine week-end afternoon, drive out into the country, park the car and hike through the woods and over the fields?

It appears that the Joneses also are interested in art. What a fine idea to visit the local art gallery. And having consumed all the local art, you might make a week-end trip together to a greater art center, stay at a hotel and go to the theater, too.

Though it is a bit early to consider vacation plans it occurs that it would be delightful if you and the Joneses could hit upon the same summer resort. You might even combine on a cabin or cottage up in Michigan.

In fact the more you think of it the more desolate life seems outside the company of the Joneses. And you part vowing to call the Joneses, while the Joneses protest they can hardly wait to call you.

And so matters stand until some six months hence when, on another rare occasion, you come face to face with the Joneses and go through the whole business of regrets and promises again.

BROADWAY

By WALTER WINCHELL

PORTRAIT OF A CITY

NEW YORK at dawn is a sea of silence with only the throb of a passing car rippling the placid hush. . . Vivid hues powder the sky's face. . . Stone and steel sentinels stand guard over the quiet streets. . . A foghorn occasionally plucks its bass strings along the waterfront. . . The sun pokes its rosy brow over the horizon, and alarm clocks cry like famished infants. . . Workers struggle out of bed and prepare their morning transfusion of coffee. . . Busy fingers of sunlight brush the darkness out of rooms. . . Weary charwomen head for home lugging their bodies as though they were heavy trunks.

BY EIGHT A.M. humanity has wrested the city from its cradle of silence. . . The city's transportation network is choked with humans. . . Buses roll along like mechanical dowagers. . . Trolleys rumble from corner to corner, swallowing a batch of humans at each stop. This is the overture for the town's swift tempo.

WHILE THE CLOCK nibbles at eternity the massive business structure of the metropolis begins to breathe. . . Type-writers go into their metallic jig. . . Machines start their raucous rhythm. . . Office buildings bulge with activity. . . Executives squat in plush offices hatching business deals. . . Ambitions, heartaches, sweat and brains all play a part in the daily struggle.

AS TIME tick-tocks toward noon most people are too busy to watch the sun carrying a torch for the sky. . . Bargain-basement fullbacks plunge into action in department stores. . . Mink-coated females sweep into upcity beauty salons—the battlefield of their war against age. Time Marches Off! . . . School children sit in classrooms and quietly absorb knowledge. . . Housewives accomplish their daily tasks—the routine is like a well-worn habit. If you listen closely, you can pick up the steady moan of vacuum cleaners.

THE LUNCH-HOUR pell-mell. . . A human avalanche pours out of office skyscrapers, floods the sidewalks and overflows into the gutter. . . Eateries are blazing with excitement. . . The sharp clatter of dishes mingles with the babble of conversation. . . Pert secretaries polka-dot their words with dimples as they discuss current romances. . . Waitresses move through the huddle of empty expressions on their frozen smiles. . . Sandwiches are devoured—via gulps. . . Office coolies tell each other what they "told the boss!" . . . Some people shove food into their mouths with one paw while clutching a newspaper with the other. . . Strangers sit at the same table and make an art of ignoring each other.

BY MID-AFTERNOON the Broadway columnist awakens after a few hours of restless slumber. . . Youngsters bubble out of schools. . . Workers gaze at their watches and wonder why time seems to dawdle. . . The Main Stem patiently waits to slip into its shimmering neon negligee. . . Show-folks make the rounds of producers' offices searching for the reality of their dreams. . . Wall Street's tickers provide the beat for the nation's financial heart. . . The Stock Exchange is seething with action as it reaches its closing hour.

TWILIGHT IGNITES the heavens with its var-colored beauties. A magical glow casts its spell over the city. . . Commuters rush to catch their trains. Subways are pushed around like people while battling through the rush hour jungle. . . Lights flip on in various skyscrapers, and a graph of mazdas outlines against the sky. . . Broadway gets on its mark, ready for the nightly sprint. . . Chorines' high heels tattoo the sidewalks en route to their jobs.

WHEN 7:30 makes its appearance the Main Stem is giving a glow-by-glow description of itself. . . Families in residential sections are having their dinner and settling down to enjoy the soft music of life. . . The cast of a new show attempt to tame their jittery nerves. In a few hours they could zoom into a Paradise of fame and fortune or stumble in the maze of oblivion. There aren't many shows that can match the thrill of this real-life drama. . . Two hours later a cavalry of noise tramples Bright Light Valley. But most of the burg's business areas offer a playground for echoes. . . Moonlight polishes windows of darkened offices. A tomb-like quiet seals the streets where industries hummed just a few hours before. . . Icy winds race through the empty canyons and mumble their meaningless monologue.

AT SHOW-BREAK TIME the Main Street reaches the apex of its explosive hoopla. . . A thousand different sounds are operating at the top of their voices. . . The clogged traffic snails forward. . . A long tail of limousines and cabs waits to pick up first-nighters. . . Penny arcades and all the other knick-knacks of amusement add to the feverish hurly-burly. . . Brakes screech, horns honk, cabbies cuss. Everybody is in a hurry to get nowhere in particular. . . At midnight residential sections go to sleep, and the streets are drowsy. . . Dim street lamps squint in the darkness. . . Apartment houses sketch mammoth shadows. . . During this time of night the greater part of the city is as hushed as any small town.

AFTER THE CINDERELLA HOUR Broadway starts to empty its human cargo. . . Optimists freeze on corners trying to flag an empty cab. . . Veteran Main Stemmers amble into their pet spots and begin exchanging fibs. . . The forest fire of activity is slowly being doused. . . Nightclubbers enjoy the zoo in which they are the star performers. . . Showgirls sit around joyous watching wolves memorize "their best lines". . . All-night cafeterias are sprinkled with people who sip coffee while toasting their hopes with champagne ambitions. . . The Big Alley pauses to catch its breath after a strenuous scenic exhibition.

FROM THREE A.M. until daybreak the city holds a rendezvous with beauty. There are a million sights worthy of eloquent poets and masterful painters. . . A rowdy wind ruffles the Hudson cobwebbed with streaks of moonlight. . . Avenues so quiet you can hear the large clocks above skyscraper entrances stitching the time. . . Huge edifices hold out their long arms in a salute to the sky. . . An empty park holds silence in its embrace. . . A columnist (in his midtown ivory tower) stares at the sleeping city. . . And wishes he could sleep with it. Instead of with a column.

No-NO-THIS IS NOT A SHOE AD. WHY IS IT THAT AT HOME WHERE IT'S PLENTY WARM, THE DAMES WEAR THINGS LIKE THIS

BUT OUTDOORS—OUTDOORS WHERE IT'S WET AND COLD—THEY WEAR GOOFY THINGS LIKE THIS?

Economical Menus for Tomorrow

By Meta Given

A STEAMING cup of consommé, a red tomato stuffed with a lively flavored tuna salad with rye wafers, and some fresh fruit makes a luncheon that should delight almost anybody. Tuna resembles chicken more than any other meat. That is why it is sometimes called chicken of the sea. The flavor is mild enough to respond delightfully to peppery seasonings such as mustard and piquant salad dressings. For a most attractive salad, the tuna should be flaked too small; if desired, the seasonings and dressing may be combined with the tuna two or three hours before serving time, and stored in a bowl, covered, placed in the refrigerator to marinate. The fish will absorb enough of the flavors from the seasonings to tie the salad together in a pleasant way from the standpoint of taste.

This salad should be assembled just before it is taken to the table. The tomatoes can be prepared while they are still cold by cutting like a tulip. Beginning at the blossom end, cut into sixths about two-thirds of the way down to the stem end. It is important that the tomato sections hold together. Spread gently apart to provide a receptacle for the tuna salad. Sprinkle inside of tomato lightly with salt. Then drop the salad mixture into the tomato spontaneously and make no effort to pat it down to make it compact and smooth. Lift onto a crisp lettuce cup. Garnish with a small blob of mayonnaise and serve promptly. By following these rules the tomato as well as the salad will have the freshest possible appearance. It will also be cold, and there will be no possible opportunity for any part of the salad to have a wilted or "worked-over" look.

Tomato Stuffed With Tuna Salad.
Five medium tomatoes, one seven-ounce tin tuna fish, one-third cup celery, cut in thin strips; one tablespoon lime juice, one-fourth teaspoon rind of lime, grated; one tablespoon chopped sweet pickle, one-fourth teaspoon salt, one-fourth cup mayonnaise, one hard-cooked egg, coarsely chopped; lettuce cups; cucumber, about one-half medium scored and cut into one-eighth inch slices; one hard-cooked egg sliced.
Peel tomatoes, remove stem and chill. Place tuna in bowl and break up into smaller flakes. Mix celery, juice, rind, pickle, salt, and mayonnaise thoroughly. Combine with tuna mixing lightly but thoroughly. Place tomatoes in lettuce cups. Cut into eighths or fifths, not severing the sections. Place heaping tablespoons of tuna mixture in center of each tomato. Garnish with cucumber slices and place between tomato sections. Place slice of egg on top. Five servings.

MENUS FOR TUESDAY.
Breakfast—Stewed apples and raisins; pancakes with syrup and crisp bacon.
Luncheon—Tomato and tuna fish salad, whole wheat muffins, chocolate pudding.
Dinner—Braised short ribs, boiled potatoes, buttered green beans, carrot sticks, creamy lemon sherbet.

Braised Short Ribs.
Have two and one-half pounds short ribs cut into serving portions. Wipe with damp cloth. Brown in two tablespoons shortening. Add one and one-half teaspoons salt and one-fourth cup water. Reduce heat, cover and simmer (never boil) ribs until meat is just about tender—from three-fourths to one and one-half hours—the time depending on the age of beef. The last half hour, add one cup each of sliced onions, celery, and four medium potatoes. Again cover and cook until all vegetables are tender. Four servings.

Cream Mayonnaise
Three tablespoons cream, one-third cup mayonnaise. Beat cream until light and beat in mayonnaise. A cup and tiny egg beater are convenient for small amounts like this.

Cooked cabbage held in the refrigerator two or three days and then reheated does not lose as much vitamin C as does that kept standing on the stove for an hour or two.

Respiratory Infections

NOW is a good time to discuss about respiratory infections as they are certainly rampant. I am going to skip the real medical features which includes the bacteriologic invasion and changes. I will try and impress on my readers the common sense way to use prophylactic measures to avoid respiratory infections, the orderly and sane way to proceed to treat yourself once the infection has struck, and the sensible way to recuperate following the illness.

The best assurance against contracting respiratory infections is the care you give yourself. Proper hours at work, relaxation, rest, good elimination, moderate exercise, lots of fluids special water and good substantial food with rich foods eliminated is a good beginning. The care of the body both as to wearing apparel and cleanliness is added protection. Avoidance of wet feet and chilling of the body is important. Excessive smoking and drinking of alcoholic beverages lowers the body resistance and is to be condemned. Moderate smoking or drinking is permissible but not conducive to body build-up. The application of heat to each nostril at bedtime and proper ventilation of the sleeping room is important. Avoid over-heated houses or sudden changes in room temperature. Stay away from crowded places as much as possible. Where people are congregated and coughing and sneezing is predominant bacteria are tossed about at random. These are simple don'ts but sometimes in spite of these precautions you are victimized, thought less intensive in most instances.

If your upper respiratory chamber gives evidence of infection immediately consult your ear, nose and throat specialist. If the infection involves the chest go to bed and call your physician. This is essential to avoid serious chest complications. Absolute bed-rest is vital to avoid a prolonged illness. Your physician is prepared with sulfa drugs and penicillin. These two drugs control chest complications admirably and your physician can watch early evidence of pneumonia and hospitalize you for penicillin over the 24-hour period. X-ray of the chest is important to rule out pneumonia. Tonic spots and to have laboratory facilities for determining the type of infection and its progress. The recuperation period is important and must be insisted upon to avoid a relapse which in many instances is more serious than the primary infection. Returning to work before the infection is completely eliminated is very dangerous.

Do not flirt with a respiratory infection. It is serious and calls for medical aid and advice.

MY DAY

By Eleanor Roosevelt

LONDON. FRIDAY I went to lunch with Foreign Minister Ernest Bevin at the House of Commons. We walked through the great hall, which is the oldest part of the great building built by William Rufus. It was spared much harm from bombing, even though the section of the building in which the House of Commons sat was destroyed. I think this great hall is one of the really majestic buildings in the world; the roof, I believe, is the greatest single unsupported arch of any building in Europe. Senator Townsend and I, walking through together, were wondering how we would find out to characterize the members of Parliament, who evidently was also in the R.A.F., kindly came to our rescue and took us all the way through the maze of corridors and stairs to the dining room.

I had often been in the House of Commons before, but never happened to have a meal there. Tea on the terrace has always been something I've read about in a book, and lunch in one of the little dining rooms was an entirely new experience. I am told that during the bombings the Speaker always sent the members down into these rooms for shelter, but I doubt very much whether they were greatly protected. The windows look out on the terrace, and beyond is the river.

AS WE came out from lunch, we saw a baby in a basket waiting with its parent in the hall. For a moment I wondered just why a baby should be there! Then Mr. Bevin reminded me that down in the crypt there is a church, and that people come to married and to christen the babies in the same building where the laws of their land are made.

Later in the afternoon I went to the English Speaking Union for a reception given by the National Council of Women of Great Britain. A great many representatives of various women's organizations were there. As so often happens, I think a difference of opinion is developing among the various groups of women as to the exact representation of affiliation they desire to have with the U.N.O.

I MYSELF believe the important thing is to stress the attitude taken in the very beginning of the U.N.O. charter, which reaffirms "faith in fundamental human rights, in the dignity and worth of the human person, in the equal rights of men and women and of nations large and small." This really means, I think, that women should come in on an equal basis—not even as specialized groups, unless they are representing some particular objective. Their influence should be felt as delegates, alternates and advisers.

Among the women now here are economists, lawyers and social workers, all leaders and experts in their various fields. With this type of representation, I believe, women really achieve what they want, which is to have on all important subjects the point of view of both men and women who are working together to frame the policies of the organization.

My OPINION

By MARTHA CARR

Dear Martha Carr:

ABOUT two years ago a mother and son moved into the house next door to us. The mother wasn't very well, and my wife was most kind to her. A few months ago she passed away. Since her death the son, who is a bachelor and about my own

* Letters intended for this column must be addressed to Martha Carr at the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. Mrs. Carr will answer all questions of general interest, but of course, cannot give advice on matters of a purely legal or medical nature. stop to this situation? I have accused my wife of being in love with him and she denies it.

Accusing your wife of being in love with the man next door isn't going to help matters. If you continue in that vein your nagging and suspicion may make that very thing happen. Try to stamp on that jealousy of yours and look at the matter sensibly. The man in question has been accustomed to a great deal of home responsibility, as anyone who has an invalid member of the family solely dependent on them. Now that his mother is gone, he is lonely and doubtless completely lost without that responsibility. Since her death occurred only a few months ago he can scarcely do any going out to any great extent. But a movie occasionally, or dinner or a drive with next-door neighbors who have been such friends, is an outlet he can have without being commented on. Your friendship and kindness and your wife's through this time must mean a great deal to him. Your wife realizes this, and so would you if you let your jealousy get the upper hand. As soon as sufficient time has passed and your neighbor is feeling more like going out, arrange party at your home, and invite some attractive single girl friends of your wife's to it, plus the bachelor friend, and see if you can't get him interested in one of them sufficiently for him to start on a normal social life once more. This will be a much kinder and surer way of getting him out of your hair than for you to pitch in with a lot of accusations, or trying to forbid him your home for no good reason. Be patient just a little longer, cast aside the suspicions as unjust to your wife, and then try what I've suggested.

Dear Martha Carr:

I AM A GIRL 26 and self-supporting. Until recently I lived with my father. My two sisters are married and have homes of their own, so when Dad died I continued in the apartment alone. I entertain my boy friends there, just as I did when Dad was alive. My two sisters are shocked by this, say I'll get talked about, that entertaining men when I live alone is highly improper. They insist I should break up and live with one of them or with another relative. I am happy as I am and don't want to do this. I maintain there is nothing unconventional in the situation. Am I right, or are my sisters?

R. S.

There is no reason in the world why a well-behaved and self-respecting girl of 26 who lives alone should not extend her hospitality to men as well as to women friends. This, of course, providing you watch the hour, take care not to invite men in after midnight, are careful in choosing the type man you invite into your home, refrain from having noisy parties. Your sisters forget that you are adult and self-supporting, and that all over the city these days girls in the same position manage to conduct themselves in the same situation as yourself without comment on the part of neighbors.

IN ANSWER TO "Mother of Daughter": It seems to me you are very thoughtful to want to do this for your daughter's club, and either the cake or the flowers would be much appreciated. It makes no difference whether any other mother has the same bright idea or not. Your daughter is taking the wrong attitude.

IN ANSWER TO "Worried Graduate": On graduation night you belong with your classmates, since they are staging some sort of group affair. Tell the boy who has asked for a date on that night that you will be with the class that night but will be glad to go with him some other night that week.

CASE RECORDS

By Dr. George W. Crane

CASE H-252: Harley K., aged 29, is the father of three children: "Maybe I am unusually irritable," he confessed ruefully, "but they get on my nerves on many occasions. That is especially true when we are cooped up in the auto for a long drive, as to my wife's home in the country. The children wrangle and quarrel and argue until I think I'll go crazy. What can a fellow do to quiet them down, Dr. Crane?"

I CERTAINLY can sympathize with Harley, for when we get our five children in the car for a long drive, we often experience the same irritation. So we have developed a number of games that will help for a short time. One of them is to divide into teams and then see which can find the most four-footed animals on its side of the road during a fixed distance, such as 25 to 50 miles. Hogs and cattle, horses, sheep, cats and dogs all count. This game is good for half an hour or longer, depending upon the animation that the adults can inject into it.

Somewhat similar is the "alphabet" game. We again form competing teams and try to build up a straight sequence of letters from "a" to "z" by watching for road signs that contain the printed words from which we lift the letters. The first one to reach "z" wins. Sometimes one team will be going along famously, and then suddenly be stymied by inability to locate a "j" or an "x" or a "z" for 40 or 20 miles. Our children have spent as much as an hour on this game.

IN THE POCKET of our car we always carry an ear of corn. Our youngsters often enjoy a game wherein we first dole out 10 grains of corn apiece. They are then to take turns in having the others guess how many grains they have in their closed fist. We limit the maximum to five grains, so the range may be from zero to five.

If I guess "three" and the actual number is zero, then I pay the difference. If, however, I correctly guess the amount, then I get the grains in the child's fist.

A car radio is also a great help in keeping the children quiet. And comic books are a mainstay of many parents.

But no method will work for too long a time, so inject variation. It is also well to let the child get out and run off a little surplus energy by leg action. If they grow hungry, they are more quarrelsome, so we prepare plenty of sandwiches or stop at a restaurant for ice cream cones or a soda.

Why Do Some Succeed, and Others Fail?

By Elsie Robinson

YOU'VE watched business girls, jostling by, each one starry-eyed with her own particular dream of success. You've watched them and wondered how many of them would ever achieve those dreams which seem more desirable than anything else on earth at this moment's bright dawning—and how many would drift into some stagnant backwater of a drab job or a meaningless marriage. How many would be forced to accept the dreary compromises which so many ambitious young spirits must accept as a substitute for real joy and pride?

Yes, you've watched and wondered. And each day as "feminine opportunities" increased, the puzzle has grown greater. For what determined the dazzling destiny for some and wherein lay the secret of dreary monotony and obscurity for others? All bright... all alluring with youth's special charm... nearly all pretty and gay—then why were some doomed from the start and others as certainly set on some radiant star beam?

Every girl in America wants to know the answer to that question and Mary Margaret McBride, beloved radio analyst of human personality, has given that answer with all the wisdom, tenderness, and shrewdness of her many years as "America's first lady of the air."

IT ISN'T FAIR, THOUGH, to announce it like that. You can't "do" Mary Margaret unless you include the cream-honey richness of her moving voice... or the living gold of the face that has dared to live and love—and laugh—regardless of fate's cruellest blows... or the rippling humor that permeates each slightest gesture, each chance word, like a rare benediction.

For Mary Margaret McBride isn't just a successful working woman. She is the radiant and vital answer to every young girl's dream... the warm embodiment of that vigor and wit, that tenderness and understanding courage which built America, shoulder to shoulder, laugh by laugh, with their fighting mates.

Never has American youth been so urgent in its demands, so beset with its problems. Never have its young women in particular revolted so openly against the old formulas and taboos. Never has it clamored so loudly for larger horizons. But how to find them? Mary Margaret knows the answer to that one, too, and in a seemingly innocuous little volume she solves the greatest of all feminine secrets which she herself learned the hard way. For "Tune In for Elizabeth" isn't just any story about any working girl. It's the very flesh and blood and sinews of Mary Margaret McBride herself and what made her — and could make many millions more — click.

HERE'S A TALE of a typical American farm girl who couldn't be satisfied with the average good soil formula of seed time and harvest, pickling and preserving—a crowded corner in some country newspaper. No, she wanted more, plenty more. And lured by the magnetism of the current woman idol of the air she felt that she had found the solution to her secret discontent. And worked her young heart out for glorious battling months to achieve her vision.

So at the end, Elizabeth finds success. But she also finds failure. For, against all the rules, Elizabeth loses just when she has triumphed. Why? She has played the game by all the accepted laws... spared herself nothing... faced every challenge cheerfully and bravely. Then why should failure fall upon her like a bolt from the blue?

Elizabeth asks herself that question as so many of her young sisters have asked it before her, in what was to seem the darkest hour of her life. And in the asking she found her answer. For, like a steady hand, the words of her adored mother came back to her.

Why had one girl skyrocketed on to fame and personal joy where another, equally honest and hard working, stumbled, faltered and failed? Years before her mother had given her the reason— "A woman won or lost not because of the way she ran her job or spent herself but in direct proportion to her interest in other people. One might acquire knowledge... one might learn technique... copy poise... but a living interest in other people and their problems could not be faked. You won or you lost in direct ratio to the height and the depth of your own heart bonds. You got what you gave—no more—no less."

Dresden Doll Era for Teen-Agers

Emphasis in Spring Clothes for Girls Is on Well-Groomed Appearance

By Sylvia Stiles

IF the teen-ager is to keep up her tradition of patterning her clothes after her big sister, she's due for some drastic changes in her wardrobe this spring. These sloppy fashions which seemed on their way out last fall, not only are going but gone—if the recent presentations of new season's togs for sub-debs and young juniors are to be taken seriously. Costume after costume depicting how young Americans should dress emphasizes not only a well-groomed appearance but also a very lady-like demeanor.

It's a "Dresden Doll" era that is beginning for the teen-ager girl, says Emily Wilkins, whose spring collection has been designated "Reflections of Youth" and pays particular attention to the type of clothes that school girls wear. She advocates a Louisa May Alcott look to baggies, trim waistlines and pretty, full skirts.

The waistline undoubtedly is the focal point of the silhouette in every spring collection designed for youth and ready for critical girls' attention. A tiny waistline is a "must" this season so those teen-agers who have been watching their diets and righteously remembering what the physical education teacher has told them about posture and exercise, are due for their rewards. Not only are dresses figure-hugging at the waistline but suits and coats also have a way of nipping their waistlines so they look as small as possible.

Outstanding among the suit types featured by leading designers and on display in St. Louis are the basque jacket types. Whether they belong to the Alcott category or some other equally reminiscent of demure days, the jacket is gored severely so that it fits the figure smoothly through the midriff. Sleeves of the leg o'mutton type and a peplum that is notched at intervals serve to make the waistline look even smaller. Also contributing to this new silhouette is the skirt with unpressed pleats arranged in such a way that hips get attention. Some call this the "bare" skirt, and it looks widest at the hipline. Skirts, by the way, usually are attached to wide, shaped waistbands some of which are so deep they suggest the old-fashioned corset.

If a girl likes to make up her own spring outfit from a separate skirt and coat, the boxy jacket ensemble is recommended. The favorite jacket is brief and jaunty. It is seen most often of a navy blue woolen although other shades are available. A plaid or gray flannel skirt looks best with such a jacket. Whatever the choice of skirt, the chances are that it will be worn with a regulation long-sleeved shirt that is tucked neatly into the top of the fitted waistband.

Pockets are a feature of suits and coats as well as dresses. The bigger they are the better. The designer of teen-age clothes knows that youngsters seldom know what to do with their hands and having big pockets into which they can thrust them relieves many an awkward moment. White accents also are important. Not only will this spring's young fashion devotees wear their shirt collar over her coat collar but she will have crisp collars and cuffs for coat and for dresses. The dark dress with lingerie details that are detachable also contributes to her neat look.

LOTS of fitted coats are seen along with the boxy variety. These fitted models are the "dress up" Easter type although of such gay colors and practical materials they can be worn for general utility. The dress which looks like a coat is another item not to be overlooked in choosing a new spring wardrobe. It has the same Directorate influences seen in the fitted coats, and follows a grown-up fashion that is becoming popular this year.

The cotton dress for school wear no longer is considered a little girl type to be shunned by the high school student. The spring cottons are sophisticated in design and cut with special attention to good tailoring. A cotton poplin, for example, is seen in a horseblanket plaid pattern made into a Dutch-boy topped dress with twin rows of buttons down the front and an unpressed pleated skirt. A window-pane patterned cotton is used for another good-looking dress which has a bias moulded top, barrel skirt and high, round neckline. Jumper dresses continue popular.

When it comes to party dresses, look for crisp taffeta for picturesque models made with long or short skirts. Striped taffeta is effective as is this same material in solid colors. Light-weight wool dresses in lovely pastels are being used for dress-up needs as well as for general wear. One clever type has a brief shoulder cape that can be removed. When worn with the cape, the dress is suitable for street and when the cape is removed, a short evening dress is revealed. The one-piece dress in two-piece effect is appearing again and is especially attractive when made of printed material.

FOR that first long evening dress, chiffon is likely to be the preference of mother as well as daughter. After an absence of several seasons, chiffon is returning with a flourish for spring. It needs plenty of skirt width to make it effective as well as plenty of yardage for a softly draped bodice. Modification of government regulations controlling yardage has prompted the designers to feature chiffon again and everyone will agree it is especially graceful for the young girl. If our teen-agers are to adopt that Dresden Doll aspect, a chiffon dancing frock will help the cause along.

Contract Bridge

By Ely Culbertson

IN today's deal a slam bid intended as a sacrifice bore luscious fruit when the defense went slightly askew.

East, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

The bidding:
East 1 club
South 1 spade
West 2 diamonds
North 3 diamonds
East Pass South Pass
West Pass
North Pass

South was shrewd in persisting to six spades, inasmuch as there could not have been any defense against the six-diamond contract. West opened the diamond king (which was not so shrewd—the spade ace would have been considerably more effective) and South ruffed. A heart-diamond cross-ruff followed; then the declarer cashed the club ace and ruffed a club.

West over-ruffed with the blank ace of trumps, and, of course, had to return either a heart or a diamond. Dummy was now out of both of those suits, so, apparently West felt that it didn't matter which he led. Probably the heart queen was "nearest to his thumb," and he exited with that card.

It was an unfortunate play! Dummy ruffed with its last trump, and East's heart ace fell on the same trick. Now all South had to do was ruff another club, lay down the trump king to fell East's queen, and claim the contract.

It made a vast difference whether West led a heart or a diamond after over-ruffing with a trump ace! South had shown that he was out of diamonds and clubs. True, he might have started out with eight spades and four hearts, but if this was the case the defenders might as well toss in the sponge, because nothing could stop South from ruffing his fourth heart. The only hope, then, was that East had the spade queen; and that on a diamond lead by West he could discard his last heart and over-ruff dummy's jack when South, perforce, tried to ruff out his last heart suit.

Most people dislike citrus peelings because they are bitter. But they can be appetizing if used in marmalades, or grated and added to sauces, salads, sandwich fillings and desserts.

Your Stars

WHAT TO EXPECT

TOMORROW.

Sun in Aquarius.

General Tendencies — Tomorrow seems quite a day for all sorts of romantic affairs, strange meetings, unexpected incidents and changes of plans previously made. Finances show up fairly well, and buying and selling both seem stimulated. The stock market seems favorable until the second week in February because of the position of the planet Jupiter, which governs such things. I would never take casual advice upon this subject, however, if I were thinking of investing, but would seek competent counsel.

If Tomorrow Is Your Birthday.

I doubt if you will get through 1946 without at least one romance. If you are already married, then I leave it to you to figure out how the combination will work. Your dreams seem to be purely visionary, however, and not too disturbing.

Why had one girl skyrocketed on to fame and personal joy where another, equally honest and hard working, stumbled, faltered and failed? Years before her mother had given her the reason— "A woman won or lost not because of the way she ran her job or spent herself but in direct proportion to her interest in other people. One might acquire knowledge... one might learn technique... copy poise... but a living interest in other people and their problems could not be faked. You won or you lost in direct ratio to the height and the depth of your own heart bonds. You got what you gave—no more—no less."
